El Paso doctor plans to buy vacant hospital

Peck owns the Dallas-based hospital. He plans to purchase the vacant hospital building and convert it into a nursing home.

Peck has offered for the hospital building has been vacant since mid-1981 when the children's program housed there was moved to Albuquerque. Marr said a meeting staff plans to meet for the hospital building and determine what fixed equipment he determine the value of the building, she said. "Then we can attempt the proposed contract in writing," she said. Marr said he is possibly ready by the end of the month to purchase the facility. Marr said a potential problem is that the facility is based on a 1960s era building. The hospital plans to purchase the building, but it cannot take until that time. One possible solution is to have the equipment from the old site after Peck hospital, she said. Marr said he is possibly ready by the end of the month to purchase the facility. Marr said a potential problem is that the facility is based on a 1960s era building. The hospital plans to purchase the building, but it cannot take until that time.

Plan calls for closing of school

United Press International
ODESSA — Ector school officials have voted to close a mostly minority school as part of a long-desegregation plan ordered by a federal judge. School officials made their proposal Friday in response to U.S. District Judge Fredson's order late Thursday to develop a comprehensive desegregation plan in the next few weeks. Shannon, who ordered temporary remedies to correct segregation practices in the County Independent District last October, sides in the 10-year-old litigation case they would develop to review proposals developed by school officials. Shannon scheduled a hearing on the case May. School officials said that one solution would be to close Ector School, a predominantly minority school in south Odessa. The action would be to distribute minority students to other district schools, including Odessa High School and Hagan High School in the eastern part of the city, officials said. The closing would also be more comprehensive offerings to minority students, especially those considered "legitimate." Shannon said the main problem was that students must now attend schools to receive a quality education.
