New refining process aids major producers

United Press International
LOS ANGELES — Major oil companies are using a new oil conversion method that could decrease dependence on foreign supplies and provide the United States with petroleum supplies for many years, an oil industry newsletter reports.

But smaller, independent refiners that have not been able to invest in the modern "cracking" techniques are going under, the Lundberg Letter disclosed Sunday.

The big refiners are able to use less expensive heavy crude and, at the same time, are able to sell the light oil and gasoline products at attractive prices.

"They have a two-time economic advantage over the little guys who have not been able to invest in their own long-range futures," newsletter Editor Trilby Lundberg said.

Ten independent refiners raised gasoline prices from one-half cent to 3 cents per gallon last week in much of the country, she added.

Computer teaches Chippewa language

United Press International
HAYWARD, Wis. — Ojibwa, an ancient Chippewa language that has all but vanished, is being used in what is believed to be the nation's first use of computers to teach an American Indian language.

The Chippewa language has been taught in kindergarten through grade 12 since 1976 when 2,000 members of the Lac Courte Oreille tribe established a school system on the 40,000-acre reservation. It is one of the few such systems in the nation to be completely tribal-owned and operated.

Miami has violent Easter weekend

United Press International
MIAMI — A dozen people died in violent deaths in a little more than 12 hours on Easter weekend, forcing medical examiner's vans to wait in line to unload bodies at the morgue.

"I can't remember another day with so many separate incidents of murder, attempted murder and suicide," police Sgt. Mike Gonzalez, a 25-year veteran of homicide investigations, said Sunday.

None of the slayings appeared to be related, police said.

Three victims were Mariel Cuban refugees who had been stabbed and slashed to death. Another "Marielito," Angel Santos, 32, was shot to death by another refugee in a revenge slaying, police said. A derelict died from wounds inflicted earlier when he had been beaten with a board.

Most of the victims were shot, including a man blasted in the back of the head with a shotgun after he insulted a waitress for not speaking in English.

Elaine Rosenthal, 46, ex-wife of a prominent Miami attorney, was charged with first-degree murder, accused of killing Joseph Hagendorf, 36, in his high-rise apartment before dawn Saturday. Authorities said the motive was not known.

Otto Sheely, 53, a Riviera Beach building contractor who had driven to Miami to consult a spiritualist about his future, was found shot to death in his car.

Two men shot themselves to death in the apartments of their girlfriends, police said.

"There is no explanation," he said. "It's all just chance, like rolling the dice."

The deaths — nine slayings and three suicides — occurred between 1 a.m. and 4 p.m. Saturday.

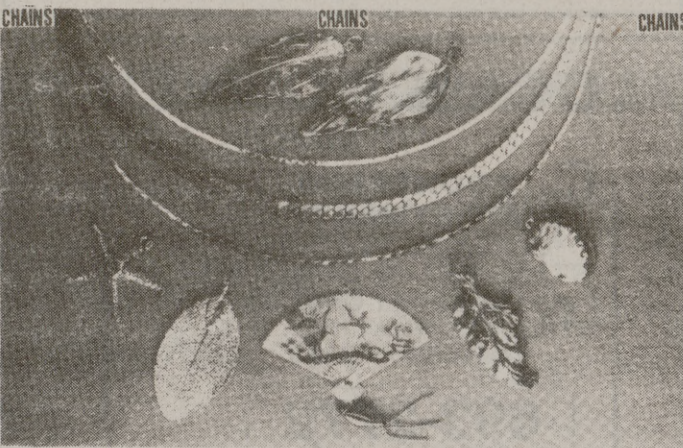

Police and morgue officials began calling in reinforcements before noon. At one point, the medical examiner's vans waited in line to unload murder victims at the morgue.

Some officers suggested the 90-degree weather might have contributed to the violence.

"It's a combination of chance, the heat, the full moon and the Easter holiday," said homicide detective Bruce Roberson.
