national Requirements

"The new requirements will have very little effect on our enrollment this fall," Gale T. Wood, associate director of admissions, said.

The University of Arkansas, a state-supported school, has 12,489 undergraduates enrolled. To be accepted by the university, a student must have graduated from an accredited high school, have obtained at least a 2.0 grade point average, and have a score of at least 18 on the ACT. However, a student may be admitted into a special program at the university without meeting these requirements.

Maribeth Lynes, assistant director of admissions for the University of Arkansas in Fayetteville, said most students enter the College of Arts and Sciences. The colleges of business administration and engineering have grown the fastest, she said.

The University of Houston,

Rice University, Baylor University, Texas Christian University, and Southern Methodist University all are planning on limiting enrollment in the future.

Robert Brashear, assistant director of admissions, said the University of Houston is planning to raise entrance requirements in the fall of 1983. A student in the bottom quarter of his class will be required to have a minimum SAT score of 1,000. The SAT score may will decrease by 100 points for every quarter higher a student ranks.

At Texas Christian University, Al Young, director of transfer admissions, said it is likely that entrance requirements will rise in the near future. Students now must be in the top half of their graduating class and have a minimum score of 400 on both the verbal and mathematics sections of the SAT, or a score of 18 on the ACT.

Southern Methodist University is lowering the number of freshmen that will be admitted this fall. Scott F. Healy, director of admissions, said it will just be a case of more students applying for less spots.

SMU bases its acceptances on grade point average and class rank, as well as extracurricular activities, recommendations, a personal interview and a 300-word essay.

Prospective SMU students must have taken certain required classes while in high school, such as a designated number of math, English and science classes. Those accepted into the university usually rank in the upper third of their class if they went to a public high school, and in the top half of their class if they went to a private school, Healy said.

Rice University has an undergraduate enrollment of 2,500. Rice judges its applicants on several different criteria, including high school grades, SAT and achievement test scores, high school recommendations and a personal interview.

At Baylor University, Thomas, associate admissions, said entrance requirements will not change in the near future, but he does plan to become more active when judging applicants. Students are required to be in the top half of their class and have a score of 1,000 on the SAT on the ACT.

At Texas Tech, the number of undergraduates has remained fairly stable in the past 5 years. Long, director of undergraduate admissions, said there are immediate plans to change entrance requirements.

Students who rank in the top quarter of their class are required to meet any SAT or ACT score. The second quarter must have a SAT score of 800 and a score of 19.

Hollywood policemen facing burglary, theft, sex charges

United Press International
LOS ANGELES — Police Chief Daryl Gates says some of his men were unable to resist the illicit attractions of Hollywood and now face charges ranging from running a burglary ring to having sex with teen-age girl Explorer Scouts.

Several policemen have been suspended and the division's top officer left the department rather than accept a demotion. Police are charged with burglarizing stores they were supposed to protect, stealing $8,600 worth of jewelry from the station's property room, looting $1,450 from an overflowing bail money box and having sex with some of the girl Explorer Scouts assigned to the station.

Capt. Jerry Feinberg took early retirement recently rather than take the demotion that came in a shakeup of his division. Feinberg says he's been made a scapegoat.

Gates put most of the blame for the scandals on the 30 sergeants, the "middle managers," who he said "chummy with their wives" did not provide leadership.

Martin Reiser, a psychologist, said a "lot of pimps, prostitutes and photographers tend to congregate over a long period of time that this kind of activity deal."
