Discussion of research on effective teaching and application of that research will be the focus of a teacher education conference to be held here next Wednesday and Thursday. The conference, sponsored by the Texas A&M College of Education and the Office of Special Education Deans' Grant, will study research that has been done on effective schools, outlines of the effective teacher as determined by this research and other related subjects.

D. C. Corrigan, dean of the College of Education, said the college has been studying changes that should take place internally, and he said it is time to bring that research out in a conference. The speakers for the conference will talk on three subjects including studies on effective schools, how to implement new teacher programs and where research should focus now. Each speaker will cover a specific aspect of one of the topics before interested groups will be able to meet to discuss the lectures.

Jimmy Chagra pleads innocent in killing of Judge John Wood

United Press International
SAN ANTONIO — Jimmy Chagra pleaded not guilty Wednesday to charges he paid a hit-man $250,000 to assassinate a federal judge slated for Chagra's 1979 drug conviction trial. U.S. District Judge William Wilson accepted the plea of Chagra and four others linked to the case in the John Wood Jr. federal Courthouse, named for the judge who was killed outside San Antonio townhouse by a sniper May 29, 1979. The arraignment of Charles Harrelson, the man federal investigators charge was hired by Chagra to shoot Wood, has been delayed until he can get an attorney.

Chagra complained to Sessions about federal surveillance tactics used during the investigation. "Am I going to have an opportunity to consult with my co-defendants or my lawyers in a room that will not be wiretapped or taped illegally, or do I have to worry that when I talk to my attorneys the conversations will be taped?" Chagra asked the judge. An April 15 indictment said Chagra feared stiff punishment from Wood. Federal investigators say they believe that is the reason he hired Harrelson to kill him. Chagra was convicted of drug trafficking after Wood's death. Also pleading innocent of various drug and conspiracy charges in the case were Chagra's wife, Elizabeth, his brother, Joe, and Harrelson's wife, Jo Ann. Jimmy Chagra is serving a 30-year sentence in the federal prison at Marion, Ill., for participation in a drug smuggling scheme. Harrelson is serving a 40-year sentence on gun and drug charges at the Texas Department of Corrections in Huntsville.

Campus Names

When a cyclist is seen engineering technology students at Texas A&M University recently were inducted into the newly formed chapter of Tau Gamma Phi, a national honor society for engineering technology students. To qualify for membership in the Zeta Gamma Chapter, students must be at least a junior in the department and have a minimum 3.2 grade point ratio. The officers, elected by prospective members, are: Michael Saurage, president; Keith Morrison, vice president; Rose San Miguel, secretary; and Kim Nguyen, treasurer.

Chosen to receive Awards of Merit — denoting the outstanding member of each class — were: John Hill, a senior from Abernathy; Billy Harlin, a junior from Eldorado; Dan Kirby, a sophomore from Corpus Christi; and Keith Sultmeier, a freshman from Fort Stockton. Michael Riggs, a junior from Pasadena, won two honors — the Pfizer Award for scholarship and leadership and the Michael Szabuniewicz Award for skill in physiology and pharmacology. Top laurels for faculty went to Dr. George Stott, Dr. Greg Troy and Dr. David Hood. Dr. David Bechtol, Class of '64 and a herd health consultant from Canyon, was chosen as the college's distinguished alumnus. George Miller, a freshman from Houston, won the Kilpatrick Award for outstanding leadership and contributions. The Diamond Scholarship Award was given to Nancy Harwood, a sophomore from Dallas. The honor recognizes scholarship and leadership.
