Inmate vows to kill Reagan

United Press International
TEXARKANA — A Bowie County Jail inmate who vowed to kill President Reagan has been placed in Texarkana's Federal Correctional Institution by U.S. Secret Service agents.

Franklin Theodore Shumate, 21, was charged by federal authorities with threatening the life of the president and is scheduled for arraignment Friday.

"The president needs to be shot, and I intend to shoot him myself if I get out (of jail)," Shumate told Secret Service agents during an interview at the Bowie County Jail Tuesday.

While in the Bowie County Jail, Shumate sent a letter to Reagan saying he intended to kill him, Sheriff Thomas Hodge said. Hodge said Bowie County officials knew nothing about the letter until after it had been intercepted by federal authorities.

"The next thing we knew was that the Secret Service came in on it," Cannon said.

Larry Neal of the Secret Service in Tyler would not say when the letter was intercepted.

Chief Deputy DeWayne Cannon said he thinks Shumate made the threat on the president's life to avoid being sent back to a state facility in Florida, where he faces charges of escape and aggravated assault on a police officer.

Authorities say Shumate, described as an expert in the martial arts, severely beat a prison guard when he escaped March 27 from the St. John County Prison in Florida. He had been convicted of aggravated battery on a police officer.

Six days after he escaped, Texarkana authorities captured Shumate at a house he was renting in the city.

HOUSTON — A San Antonio law officer who shot and killed one of two robbery suspects at a Houston motel where the officer was staying says he was threatened by the man.

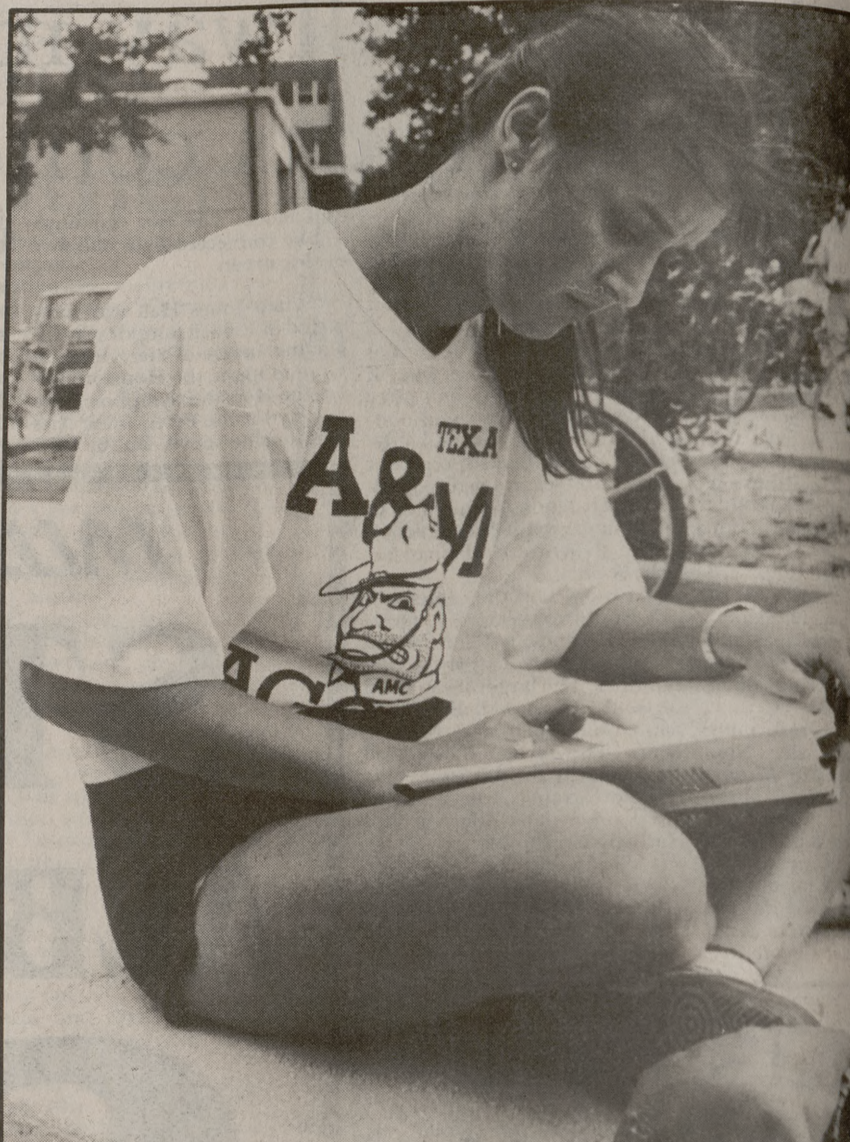

William A. Weilbacher, 53, a Bexar County deputy sheriff, said he was on his way to his room late Tuesday night at the La Quinta Motor Inn when he was approached by two men.

Weilbacher said one of the men threatened him with what appeared to be a large, black automatic pistol. He then started removing valuables from the officer's pockets.

The off-duty policeman said he reached into his pocket, pulled out a .22-caliber derringer and told the suspects he was a law officer and that they were under arrest. Weilbacher said he was threatened again with the gun, and he shot the armed man once in the upper chest.

The other suspect escaped. Police said they found an air gun at the scene.

Killer saved by court;
death sentence lifted

United Press International
AUSTIN — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals Wednesday overturned a death sentence given to a man convicted of killing a Houston store clerk, saying the state had failed to prove the man would commit further violent acts.

James Lawrence Roney was convicted of killing Nyugen Viet Hoang in October 1979 with a sawed-off shotgun during the holdup of a convenience store.

An autopsy showed that Roney shot Hoang from a distance of less than three feet. Another clerk was present.

At the punishment phase of his trial, the state presented evidence that Roney had participated in a separate robbery just moments before the holdup in which Hoang was killed. The state also tried to prove that in the days after the shooting, Roney spoke casually about the killing, with no indication of remorse.

Roney testified that he was only 17 at the time of the killing; he had only an eighth-grade education; he had no prior arrests and had voluntarily surrendered to police.

The jury gave Roney the death penalty after ruling he would commit future violence and would be a danger to society.

However, the appeals court said the state failed to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that Roney would commit more violent acts.

"To hold that the state's offense, standing alone, support such a verdict mean that virtually every offender in the course of a would warrant the death penalty," the decision said.

The judges changed Roney's sentence to life in prison.
