Utility costs to be discussed tonight

Utility costs to residential consumers will be the topic of a panel discussion featuring area utility and municipal representatives tonight at 7:00 in the A&M Consolidated High School Library.

"We want people to better understand what determines their energy costs," said Charlene Clark, a Texas Energy Extension Service representative.

There are many factors such as the cost of the fuel itself and the equipment used to provide that fuel that determine the cost of utilities," she said.

Representatives from Lone Star Gas, Bryan Utilities and the City of College Station Energy Department will discuss how present and future utility costs are determined. A question and answer session will follow.

The program, which is free to the public, is part of a continuing series of community education activities sponsored by the Texas Energy Extension Service and the College Station Independent School District Community Education Program.

Man, 40, arrested in indecency case

United Press International
EL PASO — A man, 40, suspected of keeping more than two dozen hungry children crammed in two small motel rooms during a candy-selling trek through west Texas was held Wednesday on a charge of indecency with a child.

Bilal Mohammed Ali was arrested late Tuesday, a police sergeant said. His bond was set at $100,000.

Ali is suspected of one or several attempts of sexual indecency with the children, said Lt. Richard Cuellar of the El Paso Police Youth Services Division.

Cuellar said the high bond was set because of "the possibility of other charges being filed today."

Those charges could include injury to a child or neglect, he said.

"He really wasn't taking care of them by properly feeding them," Cuellar said. "The kids are afraid of him so they didn't want to say much, but last night we were able to break a couple of them."

The 29 youngsters, including five of Ali's children, were in foster homes Wednesday in the custody of the Texas Department of Human Resources, Cuellar said. He said officials hoped to return the children to their parents in San Antonio Thursday.

Also found in the Stardust Motel rooms Monday were six or seven adults, including Ali's wife. The other adults were teenagers who, Cuellar said, could take care of themselves.

None of the others was "involved criminally in anything," he said.

DHR officials said they received an anonymous telephone tip late Monday about the children. Some children said they had not been fed for 24 hours when Ali gave each of them a cup of cold cereal.

Ali denied the children had gone hungry. He said they were only complaining because one of the older boys wanted to go home.

"Some of these kids have been coming with me to El Paso from San Antonio for seven years," he said.

He said he paid the youngsters 75 cents for each $2.50 box sold during a six-week trek that had taken them to San Angelo,

Midland-Odessa, Amarillo and El Paso.

Ali said profits from the sales went to the Black Muslim Church.

Lemore English, 11, said he sold candy for Ali last year, but couldn't remember how much he had made.

He said most of his co-workers were from San Antonio.

Charles Gembinski, DHR child welfare office program director, said each child "ate two breakfasts and some were still hungry."

He said his staff was attempting to contact parents by telephone.
