McEnroe, Connors star victorious at Wimbledon

United Press International
WIMBLEDON, England — Wimbledon today becomes the tournament that asks the question: Can a ladies tennis championship start without 15 of the top 16 players?
The answer is yes. Tradition demands that last year's champion start the proceedings in center court, but all 16 women's seeds this year draw first-round byes.
So defending champion Chris Evert-Lloyd meets Barbara Gerken of Thousand Oaks, Calif., today in a second-round match.
All the other 16 seeds have the day off — from top-seed Martina Navratilova down to 16th-seed Evonne Cawley. That means no sight of Tracy Austin, Andrea Jaeger, Hana Mandlikova, Wendy Turnbull, Pam Shriver and Yugoslavia's Mima Jausovec, to name only the first eight seeds.

Instead are matches featuring Eva Pfaff vs. Elizabeth Sayers, Marie Pinterova against Claudia Pasquale and Andrea Temesvari vs. Diane Desfor.
Rain on opening day Monday left many men's matches to make up. Rain, a surprise sub-way strike and early evening gloom that was almost like midwinter left the $1,068,000 tournament something more than to make up — more than 23,554 people packed through the turnstiles, paired with 32,075 on the opening day.

Defending champion McEnroe threw no tantrums, and that mildly, with one fault call and briskly dispatched boyhood chum Van Wilzen, 2, 6-2, 6-1.
Former champ Jimmy Connors, who beat McEnroe last week, lost one fewer game, brushing off South African Mike Myburg, 6-0, 6-0.
