Ready to serve

L Troop, 3rd Squadron, 163rd Armored Cavalry Regiment of the National Guard returns from its annual field training at Fort Bliss. The troop comprises area residents and students who train for two weeks each summer. The National Guard serves during emergencies.

Schools to get more advisers

Raymond Bynum, commissioner of education with the Texas Education Agency, said Friday he is implementing a plan to establish three regional service centers that would be charged with duties now held by the commissioner's office.

Bynum, speaking at the School Administrative Leadership Conference at Texas A&M University, said $750,000 to $800,000 would be spent this year on the program — recently approved by the state board of education — which is designed to provide public schools with top-notch, readily available, instructional leadership.

"The service center is charged by law as being the planning center for the region," Bynum said. "I am convinced you cannot have educational leadership from 25 people who are sitting in a building in Austin and get out about once every five years."

Bynum wants to accomplish one goal with the service center — to increase the ability to hire the instructional consultants in different areas of the school curriculum.

Bynum said the Texas Education Agency currently employs more than 15 home economics consultants, about the same number of consultants in agricultural production, one math and no language arts consultants.

"What I want is 20 math and 20 language arts consultants who are top notch, available to you and close to you," he said. "I want to get outside my pay structure so that I can pay them a decent salary."

Bynum said other changes he intends to propose to the state board in September are to change the textbook adoption cycle from eight to six years and to establish a one-week training workshop for persons who are hired for the first time as school superintendents in the state.

"Too many people are coming to me and saying, 'I've just been hired by the state of Texas and I don't know anything,'" Bynum said.

Reward offered for printer, computer stolen on campus

Crime Stoppers needs help this week in finding the persons responsible for the burglary of a TRS-80-III home computer, serial number 0006568, from 304 Physics Building at Texas A&M University.

The computer, along with an Epson MX 80 Printer, serial number 375655, and floppy disks were stolen on the night of June 16. The computer equipment has a total value of $3,000. Since September 1981, the beginning of the Texas A&M fiscal year, $33,000 in state property has been stolen. This is the second computer that has been stolen this month.

Crime Stoppers is offering $1,000 for any information leading to the arrest and grand jury indictment of those responsible for this crime. Anyone able to help is asked to call Crime Stoppers at 775-TIPS.

Crime Stoppers also pays cash rewards to persons providing information which leads to an arrest and indictment in any unsolved felony. Information in all cases will be handled confidentially.

Campus Names

Dr. Ian Tizard, formerly of the University of Guelph, Canada, has been named head of the Department of Veterinary Microbiology and Parasitology at the Texas A&M College of Veterinary Medicine.

Tizard, a native of Belfast, Northern Ireland, held a similar post at Guelph and is the author of more than 70 research papers and a textbook on veterinary immunology.

He replaces Dr. Don Lewis, who has served as interim department head for the past year and will return to full time teaching and research.

Dr. J. Milton Nance, professor emeritus of history at Texas A&M, has been elected a knight of San Jacinto in the Sons of the Republic of Texas.

Nance, a former head of the Department of History, can trace his ancestry back to several early Texas settlers including John Rugeley, who served in the seventh and eighth congresses of the Republic of Texas.

Election to the Knights of San Jacinto is the highest honor awarded in the Sons of the Republic of Texas.

Texas A&M Professor Charles D. Holland has written his sixth book dealing with distillation in the chemical engineering profession.

Due in bookstores in December, the McGraw-Hill book is entitled "Computer Methods for Solving Dynamic Separation Problems." Holland has been head of the chemical engineering department at Texas A&M since 1964. This is his second book for McGraw-Hill.
