

Reagan opposes anti-nuclear resolution

House committee asks arms freeze

United Press International
WASHINGTON — The House Foreign Affairs Committee Wednesday became the first congressional body to approve a nuclear freeze resolution over the opposition of President Reagan.

The committee voted 26-9 for the resolution calling on the United States and the Soviet Union to seek "to achieve a mutual and very viable freeze on the testing, production and further deployment" of nuclear weapons.

Reagan opposed the measure on grounds it would lock the Soviets into a superior military position.

Seven Republicans voted for the freeze resolution.

Despite pleas that the nuclear freeze issue not become a partisan measure, none of the Democrats present voted against the amendment by Rep. Jonathan Bingham, D-N.Y.

The nuclear freeze issue lost its first congressional test last month when the Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted 10-7 to reject a similar amendment just before approving a pro-administration arms control resolution on May 27.

The seven Republicans voting for the Bingham amendment were Reps. William Goodling of Pennsylvania, Millicent Fenwick of New Jersey, Jim Leach of Iowa, Arlen Erdahl of Minnesota, Toby Roth of Wisconsin, John LeBoutillier of New York and Paul Findley of Illinois.

"This is ill-timed, ill-advised, impractical and not in line with the realities of the world," said Edward Derwinsky, R-Ill., who spoke for the anti-resolution Republicans.

Sex education aids teenagers, researchers say

United Press International
NEW YORK — A Johns Hopkins University study says sex education in schools does not foster promiscuity and apparently discourages teenage pregnancies.

"The data seem to provide overwhelming support for the claim that the decision to engage in sexual activity is not influenced by whether or not teenagers have had sex education in school," the researchers reported Tuesday.

The study, based on research in 1976 and 1979 and funded by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, was done by professors Melvin Zelnik and Young J. Kim of the Hopkins Department of Population Dynamics.

The study also turned up evidence sex instruction in schools appears to lessen the incidence of teenage pregnancy.

"Young women who have had sex education appear less likely than those who have not to become pregnant if they are sexually active," Zelnik and Kim wrote in "Family Planning Perspectives," the journal of the Alan Guttmacher Institute, a special affiliate of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America.

"These are the first data from a national study to throw light on the controversy which has been boiling since at least the 1950s, about the impact of school sex education courses on teenage sexual activity, contraceptive use and pregnancy," institute officials said.

A related report said more than half of family planning clinics have two or more programs that involve parents in the birth control decisions of their teenagers.

University of Pennsylvania sociologist Frank F. Furstenberg Jr. and colleagues surveyed family planning clinics funded under Title X, a federally financed program.

They said 85 percent of clinics are making efforts to involve parents and many programs of that type have been in place from three to nine years.

Minister, House launch job drives

United Press International
WASHINGTON — Amid warnings that high unemployment among black youths could erupt into urban riots this summer, House Democrats and a Philadelphia minister are launching two programs intended to create jobs for disadvantaged young people.

Key House Democrats began work Tuesday on a $1 billion jobs-program bill that would provide employment for an estimated 203,000 people this summer. They sought — but failed to get — Republican support.

But Rev. Leon Sullivan, a black minister from Philadelphia, won bipartisan backing for his "Hire One Youth" program, which is endorsed by the Chamber of Commerce based on the volunteer movement favored by President Reagan.

Sullivan told reporters American business and leaders could create 1 million jobs by hiring one unemployed minority each.

He warned that the high employment rate among youths is "social dynamite" going to explode unless we do something about it, and do now.

House Democratic leader Wright of Texas called Democratic jobs program a "tour de force" to stop hemorrhaging of the economy.
