Release on Haig's surprise resignation

Editor:
Lyndon Larouche, in a statement released June 27, warned the Soviets not to portray disgraced Secretary of State Alexander Haig as a scapegoat for a "turn to the right" in the U.S. administration policies around the Lebanon war, as the Soviets did in a TASS release Saturday. Exactly the opposite is the case; U.S. observers who have been horrified by the administration's "green light" to Israeli madness in the Middle East know that it the influences governing his willful deception of the Reagan administration in the Malvinas crisis, the development of the Israeli military deployment into Lebanon and related matters. It is in this aspect of Haig's conduct that the significance of Soviet strategic miscalculation is to be located and assessed.

The key to Haig's conduct in office is given in a May 10 address by Haig's former boss, Henry A. Kissinger, to a Chatham House audience in London. Kissinger not only admitted to being actually an agent of the British monarchy during his service as National Security Advisor and Secretary of State, but indicated, more or less accurately, that post-war U.S. foreign policy is governed by secret, often unwritten agreements which the British monarchy has stipulated to the U.S. State Department.

In the case of the setting-up of the Malvinas crisis, well before March, and in arranging the recent Israeli invasion of Lebanon, Haig betrayed and deceived his own government — as well as others — as part of his collaboration with Lord Carrington and the British monarchy against the policies and vital interests of the United States.

The wily old German-American oligarch, Fritz Kraemer, who has claimed to have "invented Henry Kissinger," may exaggerate slightly when he also claims to have created General Alexander Haig.

Although Haig's active effort to bring France's President Francois Mitterrand to power during spring 1981, with help of Irving Brown, was relatively minor compared with the massive British and Schlumberger roles in rigging the French National elections, Haig was fully complicit with Lord Carrington in aiding the Carrington-Cheyson-Sharon axis, and aiding the Carrington-Cheyson agreement to revive the British-French 1916 Sykes-Picot treaty for throwing the United States' influence out of the Middle East. Haig collaborated with the British to isolate the United States not only from the Middle East, but also Africa and Ibero-America, and to split the United States from Japan and the Asean nations in East Asia, with supporting British operations aimed at destabilizing India.

was Haig who was giving the go-ahead to Israeli War Minister Ariel Sharon for the genocidal Israeli incursion into Lebanon. "Cautiously ecstatic" is the mood of rational forces here and abroad, Larouche reported on the Haig ouster because not only is Haig gone but the British-dictated debacle in Washington over both foreign and economic policy has now come "unstuck."

The following is some of the release by Lyndon Larouche:

This morning (June 25), I have instructed my staff to deliver the following dispatch to the offices of the Soviet News Agency TASS.

The radio news service of the New York Times headlined its morning broadcasts with the report that Moscow Pravda characterizes the just-ousted Alexander Haig as a "scapegoat for the foreign policy of the Reagan administration."

The least significant flaw in that characterization is the fact that the reality of Haig's firing is 180-degrees opposite to both the New York Times' own and the reported Pravda interpretation of the incident. The important fact is that such an assessment in Moscow implies a very dangerous strategic miscalculation among elements of the Soviet leadership.

The cause of Haig's firing is that he was caught red-handed in aggravated deception against the President of the United States, and that this deception was successfully brought to the attention of relevant circles of the White House. In this circumstance, the continuing pressures on the President from advisors who insisted Haig must be kept in office, no longer sufficed to save Haig from the ouster which has been imminent on many earlier occasions.

All honest patriots among informed circles here are best described as "cautiously ecstatic" at Haig's ouster. Although the dumping of Haig does not by itself correct the numerous problems Haig has either directly or indirectly contributed to creating, it would not have been possible to correct these problems so long as Haig retained the massive powers he and his immediate accomplices had usurped during a recent period.

The fact of Haig's virtually treasonous conduct in office is less significant than

Hare Krishna economics

The Hare Krishna Society had a booth at the KLOL Rockfest in the Astrohall Sunday. It wasn't one of the most popular exhibits since most of Houston's drugies were interested in T-shirts, records or paraphernalia, but it got my attention. Taking the chance of being brainwashed into joining their cult, I stopped to talk to one of them.

"What does Hare Krishna and Hare Rama mean, anyway?" I asked one of them, referring to their endless chant.

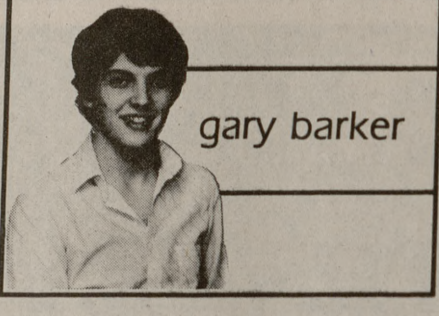

"Hare' is an address to the Lord's devotional energy. 'Krishna' means the all-attractive one and 'Rama' means the all-pleasing one," one of them rattled off without shaking his pony tail.

"Oh, you mean Ronnie Reagan?" I asked.

"No, oh, no, the chant is a mantra that one repeats in meditation in order to make his life more sublime," he said.

"Well, what do you think of Reagan's budget and the $100 billion deficit?" I interrupted.

"Well," he said slowly, "I think the budget has its positive side and its negative side. The deficit is large but the spiritual will survive. You see, we all need to get back to the Godhead and not ..."

"Yeah, what makes me mad about it is that the government will have to borrow to make up the deficit and interest rates will never go down. I mean guys like you and I will never have a chance to own a house," I said.

"Yes, but you must consider the transcendental ..." Harry said.

"You know I heard on NBC that the federal government will use 92 percent of all the money available for borrowing in this country to make up the deficit. That leaves only 8 percent to be used for businesses or by people who want to buy houses. But ABC said 60 percent can never really trust the media, anyway it's a lot. I mean if Reagan were to cut all these programs, he might balance the budget in the process, interest rates might go down. That purpose anyway, isn't it?" I said.

"Yes, I suppose," Harry said.

"Well, listen, I really enjoyed your valuable insight, thanks," I said.

"What is YOUR mantra?" Harry asked me as I was about to leave.

"What the Lord giveth, Reagan can take away in one way or another," I said.

He lit an incense bulb and assumed a meditative pose, apparently unaffected by the state of world affairs. I started to ask him what he thought about the situation in Lebanon, but he cut me off.

"Brother can you spare a stick of incense?" I said.

Letter: Relief for Lebanese homeless

Editor:

We appeal to you for help in bringing emergency relief aid to the people of Lebanon, many of whom have been made homeless in the recent fighting and are urgently in need of shelter and medical supplies. Much aid is needed and it is needed now.

We have been in contact with the Lebanese Mission at the United Nations. They informed us that the U.N. Secretary General has established a world-wide U.N. Disaster Relief Coordination effort (UNDRC) and a Trust Fund for Lebanon.

The UNDRC has released a list of urgently needed supplies: first aid equipment, plasma and transfusion equipment, surgical and dressing equipment, water purification units, baby food, tents and blankets.

Those wishing to help can contact: Ilhan Lutem, U.N. Disaster Relief Coordinator, United Nations, U.N. Plaza, New York, New York, 10017.

For direct financial contributions, make checks payable to: "Trust Fund for Lebanon-U.N. General Fund," account number 015-005-291, Chemical Bank of New York, United Nations, U.N. Plaza, New York, New York, 10017.

It is unfortunate that the people of the U.S. are being denied access to hard information on the tragic dimensions and the enormity of the disaster that befell the civilian population of Lebanon. We ask you to let the U.S. government know that you are deeply concerned about the immensity of human suffering in Lebanon. Please ask the administration to step up American relief efforts in ways proportionate to the magnitude of the destruction.

P.S. The Lebanese Student Association will set up a table in the MSU contributions on Thursday. For more information, please contact: Ali Fadel, 696-1399; Tony Prince, 845-6668; Gaby Abboud, 693-7355.
