Corzine may go to NBA's Nets

United Press International
SAN ANTONIO — Free agent center Dave Corzine, the leading rebounder for the San Antonio Spurs last year, has signed an offer sheet with the New Jersey Nets for an estimated $650,000 a year in a five-year contract.

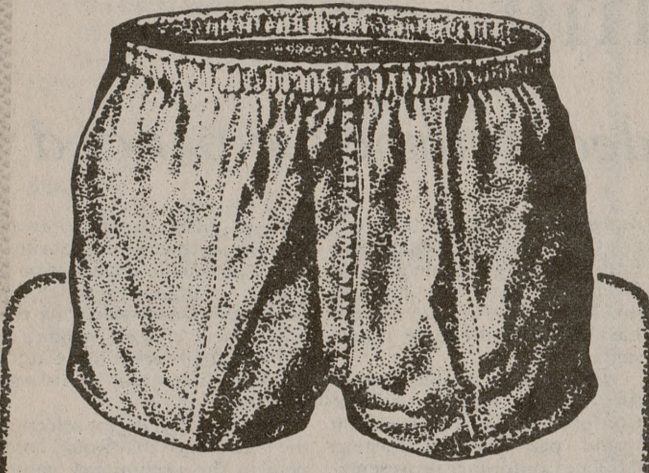

The offer sheet will be sent to the Spurs' office in the next few days, and the Spurs will have 15 days to match the offer, match and trade Corzine or let the Nets have him, Herb Rudoy, Corzine's agent, said.

Rudoy, a Chicago attorney, said that Spurs President Angelo Drossos had been noncommittal about keeping Corzine when Rudoy telephoned him.

"I assume David won't be playing with them (the Spurs) next year," Rudoy said.

Drossos, who rejected Corzine's request for $400,000 a year last fall, said he wants to see the Nets' offer before he comments.

Corzine, 26, was a first-round draft choice for the Washington Bullets in 1978 but spent most of the season on the bench.

NFL contract talks: little or no progress

United Press International
NEW YORK — The meeting began with Ed Garvey and Jack Donlan seated at a large round table opposite each other, separated by 20 feet of plush carpet.

Five hours later, Garvey, the executive director of the NFL Players Association, and Donlan, his counterpart in the Management Council, were goal posts apart.

"We're still at the point where they can't agree a player can select his own surgeon," Garvey said Tuesday after the latest round of talks on a new NFL contract.

The league's bargaining arm submitted a 48-page proposal to the union which was labeled "a disgrace" as each side accused the other of bargaining in bad faith, just two days before the contract is due to expire.

Talks are scheduled to continue today and Thursday. The NFLPA insisted on establishing a wage scale based on the concept of a fixed percentage of the clubs' gross revenue but the Management Council proposal did not address the issue.

"We feel this proposal is a basis for a settlement," said Donlan. "We have been very patient in the cavalier attitude union. They sat there and disparaging remarks about the proposal."

The council's proposal for a five-year contract reduces the amount of compensation for NFL free agents and increases minimum salaries, preseason and postseason play, insurance coverage and protection benefits. Under the new proposal a new club signing a player in the first round draft choice to the losing the player. Under the current contract, a new club signing a player for $80,000 must put up a first-round draft choice.

Tuesday's proposal also for escalating compensation levels for veteran players, a stipulation which does not appear in the current contract.

"I think there can be significant movement under offer," said Donlan.
