Porn theater owner denies charges

Child prostitution ring alleged

United Press International
NEW YORK — The owner of a Manhattan live sex theater Tuesday denied allegations made to a state crime commission investigating child pornography that he employed children in live homosexual shows. William Oates, who owns and operates the Follies Theater in Manhattan, told the state Senate Select Committee on Crime that charges made by committee investigators about his theater were "inaccurate, incorrect and all made up." The committee was told Monday that a call-boy prostitution and pornography ring in Washington had sold information on its clients to Soviet, British and Israeli intelligence agencies, and that the ring was only part of a nationwide network operating in New York, Houston, Los Angeles, San Francisco and New Orleans. "We deny unequivocally that any minors were on the premises," Oates' lawyer, George Vallario, told the committee, which is investigating male child pornography and prostitution. Oates, who said he had no connections with organized crime, also denied charges that homosexual dancers were engaged in prostitution in his theater but said, "I have no idea what they do outside." Regarding the use of minors, Vallario told the committee: "These men are deceptively young-looking." Dale Smith, a committee investigator who worked with Washington police, told the panel Monday that call-boy services were selling information on clients to Soviet, British and Israeli spy agencies. Smith said he learned about

British and Israeli intelligence purchases from Robert Kohler, who is said to have worked as an accountant for several of the prostitution services in the Washington area. Smith said a member of the intelligence community told him the Soviets also had bought the information. The investigator did not say if the clients were government officials, but it is believed that is the sort of information foreign intelligence agencies would be interested in as well as anything involving diplomats based in the nation's capital. Detective Anne Fisher of the Washington Metropolitan Police told the hearing that a number of pimps have set up a nationwide exchange for boy prostitutes.

The boys, Fisher said, were used for pornography, call services and street solicitation. "A group of pimps set up connections in Houston, Los Angeles, San Francisco, New Orleans, New York and Washington, D.C.," Fisher said. "An awful lot of young boys are being permanently and psychologically damaged," said State Sen. Ralph Marino, the committee chairman. Smith said that entertainment at the Follies Theater consisted of live sex shows involving under-age boys who engaged in homosexual prostitution "before, between and after shows." Smith said the owner of the Follies Theater, William Oates, also ran Cinema Follies in Washington and Best of Both Worlds in Pittsburgh.

Slowing decline in drilling rigs good news, oil magazine says

United Press International
HOUSTON — An oil industry magazine has reported that a slowing decline in the number of operating United States drilling rigs was good news for the energy business, but has warned that world events make for an unpredictable final outcome.

at work has plummeted from 4,530 at the end of 1981 to 2,694 last week. "Although the slump in activity has been steeper and gone deeper than anyone expected, there are signs that the worst may be behind us," Dudley wrote.

World Oil Publisher William Dudley said in a letter previewing a drilling activity report Monday that the decline in drilling had flattened since the first week of June.

Although Dudley was guardedly optimistic, he warned fulfillment of the magazine's hopeful outlook depended on unpredictable events. "For example, an Iranian victory in Iraq would do no less than jeopardize most of the industrialized world's fuel supply in the Persian Gulf region, a turn of events that would only cause U.S. activity to zoom," Dudley wrote. "Conversely, any collapse of OPEC production limitations could further bloat the crude surplus problem and depress prices, with a predictable effect on the business."

Hughes Tool Co. spokesman L.C. Kerridge agreed the rate of decline has slowed and reported this week's count is up 36 rigs over last week. "It's flattened relative to what it was doing in the March, April and May period," Kerridge said. "If you look at the big drilling states, it's pretty flat." Hughes' count of rigs at work in the United States has dropped every week but two since June 1. Ironically, Dudley said, 1982 would probably be a record year for the number of wells completed in the United States because of the delayed effect of the drilling boom in the last few months of last year.

Girl he took was his daughter

Kidnapping charges dropped

United Press International
CALDWELL — Kidnapping charges against a 19-year-old who abducted a 2-month-old baby were dropped today because the man is the child's father and he broke no law, Burleigh County Sheriff's officials said. "The woman didn't tell us the whole story," said Deputy Larry Lee. "But the man is the natural father and there is no law that says the father can't have his child." Jesse Nava, who is from Mexico but has been living in the Bryan-College Station area, was arrested about 7:30 p.m. Monday. He had his daughter, Veronica, with him at the time. The child has a serious heart condition and must be given medication twice a day, See said. However, she was not due to be given any medicine until 10 p.m.

and was in fine condition Tuesday. A passing motorist heard a description on the radio of the child and her abductor, and asked Nava, who was holding the child, if he wanted a ride. The unidentified motorist took Nava to the sheriff's office, where deputies placed Nava under arrest. He is still being held on a $200 bond for a charge of disorderly conduct, stemming from a fight he had Saturday with Melinda Prado's brothers. Prado is the mother of Nava's child. See said although Prado usually has custody of the child, "there are no court records which say which parent had legal custody." See added: "Nava had taken the child a few weeks ago, too." Prado is Nava's common-law wife, See said.

Two arrested in Dallas in connection with Atlanta kidnapping, rape case

United Press International
ATLANTA — Police in Texas have arrested two more men wanted in connection with a kidnapping that began when a group of men is said to have broke into an Atlanta house Saturday, threatened the five occupants with knives and guns, and raped the only female present. FBI officials said that Donnie Ray Meyers, 21, and Phillip Wayne Kelly, 18, both of Sylva, Ala., were arrested in Dallas Monday. "The arrests bring the total to five, and FBI officials said they are now searching for only one more suspect, Danny Clifford Myers, 23, of Montgomery, Ala." At an arraignment hearing Monday, U.S. Magistrate Joel M. Feldman set bond for the three men arrested earlier. Feldman set bond for Ervin Clark, 33, and Steven Harold Oliver, 27, both of Atlanta, at $500,000. Bond for Joseph Todd Jones, of Atlanta, was set at $50,000. Asked why the bond set for Jones was so much lower, Feldman said, "Based on information from the affidavit the involvement by Jones was not as involved."

Feldman appointed a public defender attorney for Jones and said he was still trying to appoint two outside attorneys for Clark and Oliver. A preliminary hearing for the three men has been set for Aug. 4 in U.S. District Court. "It was about 6:30 Saturday morning when they broke down the door," said Fred Schou. "They had a shotgun pistol — a sawed-off shotgun — and a gun with a silencer on it. They wanted money and to kill us. They told us, 'We rob for a living,' and said they wanted to kill us and all that." Schou said the intruders immediately attacked the woman, who was visiting one of the men living in the rented house. "They raped her from the time they got here — took turns," Schou said. "I want to see those guys burn in hell for what they did to her." FBI officials said the men ransacked the house and robbed the occupants of money and jewelry. FBI public relations officer Dick Berry said that one of the victims was pistol-whipped on the head and was later hospitalized. Schou said he had about $190 taken from him. Later, he said "they gathered us all up" and forced the men into Schou's Volkswagen van and took the woman in a separate car.

Schou said he believes the woman was raped again because he could hear his captors laughing about
