Skin graft may save crash victim's life

United Press International
GALVESTON — Doctors at the Shriners Burn Institute say a tiny piece of skin from the burned body of Rachel Schultz may wind up saving the girl's life.

The girl, 7, was burned over 86 percent of her body July 9 when a Pan Am jetliner crashed into her family's home near New Orleans.

Although the child remains in critical condition at the Institute, doctors Tuesday said they hope work by the New York Sloan-Kettering Memorial Institute of Cancer might help provide her with new skin that would help her recover. Doctors said they sent a sliver of the girl's skin to the Institute, where Dr. Magdalena Eisinger is growing the shred into a sheet of identical skin 20 times the size of the original piece.

Rachel is not expected to reject the cultured skin because it is grown from her own.

Doctors say the skin will serve as a permanent defense against infection — a burn victim's deadliest enemy.

Rachel's physician at the Shriners Institute, Dr. David Herndon, previously has used cultured skin on burn victims. About 10 percent of Rachel's body will be covered with cultured grafts.

The use of cultured skin means fewer operations for the burn victim, who usually has 20 or more operations in the first few weeks of treatment because donor skin is rejected.

Herndon said until the culture process is proven successful, he must use almost every available bit of the victim's own natural skin to cover the open wounds.

Rachel, despite her critical condition, is alert and speaks with her doctors and nurses at the Institute.

Her doctors say she faces years of reconstructive work on her face and body if she survives. But until she is 18, all medical expenses will be free at Shriners.

Her mother, Barbara, remains in stable condition in East Jefferson Hospital in Metairie, La., where she is also receiving skin grafts. Rachel's sister Jennifer died following the crash.

Chagra says brother ordered shooting, TV station reports

United Press International
DALLAS — Jimmy Chagra, charged with murder in the death of a federal judge, accused his brother, an El Paso attorney, of ordering the shooting, transcripts of secret FBI recordings show.

Television station KDFW reported Tuesday that Chagra told a fellow inmate the gunman was not supposed to kill U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. in San Antonio until after Chagra was sentenced by Wood on drug smuggling charges.

Transcripts of secret FBI recordings obtained by the station show Chagra told his brother, "You're the one that said do it, do it. You're the one who all hot to do it."

The recordings were made in late 1980 and early 1981 while Jimmy Chagra was serving 30 years at the federal prison in Leavenworth, Kan. He was sentenced on the drug charges by another judge after Wood was gunned down May 29, 1979.

The transcript reveals Joe Chagra responded, "Well, I always thought you were talking. I never thought you'd get someone like this guy to do it."

"I always thought someone like the Face ... someone in the Mafia ... This guy's an a--."

The station reported the brothers talked two months later and Jimmy Chagra said, "Joe, y'shouldn't had me do Wood you shouldn't a ordered the Wood killing."

Joe Chagra responded, "F--- Wood."

The transcript also detailed a conversation between Chagra and inmate Jerry Ray James, who reportedly turned informant in exchange for freedom and part of a $125,000 reward, the television station said.

In the transcript, James told Chagra killing the judge was "the worst move you could ever make."

"Well, I know," Chagra responded.

"The deal was, he's gonna do Judge Wood after my trial ... after I'm in jail with life without parole."
