Black leaders ask 'all-out war' against Reagan economic plans

United Press International
LOS ANGELES — A study blaming recession and budget cuts for reversing gains made by middle-class blacks was presented at the National Urban League convention, where delegates applauded a call for war against Reaganomics.

"These are alarming developments, because if the black middle-income family, which has traditionally been the most stabilizing force in the black community, is endangered, the future of all blacks is endangered," James McGhee, director of research for the civil rights group, said Tuesday.

McGhee told a convention news conference Tuesday the black middle-class expanded in the 1960s, but is now shrinking. Federal and local government budget cuts hit blacks harder than whites because a larger proportion of blacks hold government jobs, he said.

"The extremely conservative political climate and the record-breaking recession in this country is seriously threatening the existence of an emerging, black middle-class as well," he said.

At a lunch gathering, delegates applauded a call by California's top union official for "all-out war" against President Reagan's economic program, saying they must continue to be the front-line fighters for freedom, human rights and economic and social justice for all people. But Virginia Gov. Charles Robb said at an afternoon session he backs Reagan's New Federalism in principle as a means of forcing state governments to become more involved in social welfare programs.

Robb said the federal government will have to continue paying for programs state governments cannot afford, but told delegates the New Federalism provides "a chance to make a commitment to education and to transportation and safety, improvements to social services, among other things."

Acid-laced eyedrops injure two people

United Press International
LOS ANGELES — Two shoppers have been injured by acid-laced eye drops bought at two supermarkets, forcing 50 Alpha Beta markets to pull the product off shelves along with nose drops and nasal sprays.

In both instances, customers said their eyes were burned by the liquid in Murine Plus eye drops purchased at the markets. It was later determined the liquid in both bottles had been replaced with an unknown amount of sulfuric acid.

A spokeswoman said Tuesday investigators had no idea who was responsible for the two known incidents. The first was reported last week to a store in suburban Glendale and the second on Monday to one in Hollywood.

Alpha Beta issued a warning Tuesday that bottles purchased at 50 markets in the metropolitan area "may have had their usual contents replaced with a hazardous, caustic or acidic substance."

The store asked customers to return any unused eye or nose drops, or nasal sprays of any brands purchased within past 30 days to the stores, where they will receive refunds.

"Products that have been opened and used without unusual effects can be assumed to be safe," the recall notice said, "since the reaction to the substance would cause immediate discomfort."

"We have no idea who put acid in and we don't know for the principle of the law," Esther Cramer, vice president of community relations, said. "The bottles are sealed, of course, they can be tampered with

Elephants loose following accident

United Press International
APPLETON, Wis. — A circus truck carrying seven elephants overturned at an intersection, but the Carson and Barnes Circus animals did not head for the hills — they waited patiently for a new truck to take them away.

"That was a real blessing," said Sgt. Carl Schuh of the Outagamie County Sheriff's Department after the traffic accident Tuesday. "This is farm country, and if they had gotten out, I'm sure it would have taken something like seven months to capture them."

"We've had loose cattle around here, and I've been on a few round-ups myself, but I just can't imagine how I would lasso an elephant."

The driver of the circus truck, Phillip Stewart, 21, of Melissa, Texas, was in serious condition at a hospital.

The accident occurred when the circus truck tried to brake and failed, colliding with another truck at the intersection of U.S. 45 and Wisconsin 76, Schuh said.

About 100 motorists stopped to watch the unusual accident.

"It was the greatest show on Earth," Schuh said. "A dandy. A real dandy."
