acrobat hurt in fall

United Press International DALLAS — A member of a Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus family trapeze act was hospitalized in stable condition Wednesday with injuries he suffered in an aerial collision with his father.

A spokeswoman for Baylor Medical Center said she could release no other information on Gino Farfan, 18, pending a statement by the circus later

And true to circus tradition, the accident did not stop the show Tuesday night, a circus spokesman said.

Farfan lost his grip on the bar attempting a triple and a half somersault and smashed headlong into his father, Armando Farfan, 36, who was catching on the other trapeze.

Armando Farfan, who performs with his son and wife, Anna, as the Flying Farfan Trapeze Act, did not appear to be injured and climbed down to assist his son.

Witnesses among the 16,000 people attending the opening night of the circus at Reunion Arena said the young Farfan fell bleeding and unconscious onto the protective net. He was carried from Reunion Arena by stretcher and rushed to Baylor

After the accident, the lights above the trapeze were dimmed and the next act continued on the other side of the arena as paramedics helped the fallen
