

Cooperation the problem

Bootline rules established

by Beverly Hamilton

Battalion Staff
Forming the bootline, the tradition of seniors welcoming the Texas A&M University football team back from halftime, soon may be abolished if students do not cooperate, head yell leader Tom Joseph said Tuesday.

He discouraged students coming down for bootline by are not seniors. Members Student Government will establish a senior ring check line at the south entrance to the field. The purpose is to ensure that only seniors participate.

"It's up to them (the students) whether we can have bootline," he said. "We want them to come to bootline, but they need to be on time."

Joseph said students on the third deck should move to the track surrounding Kyle Field while the Aggie Band is performing. Students on the second deck should leave their seats halfway through the performance, and first deck students should leave as the band is finishing its halftime show.

Yell leaders, Texas A&M Corps of Cadets officers of the day and Student Government representatives will be stationed throughout the estimated two to three thousand students in the bootline to organize it and keep seniors off the football field.

"The Athletic Department is very cooperative," Joseph said. "Coach Jackie Sherrill wants the track cleared as soon as possible and wants it done efficiently."

The Corps will not form a spirit line for the team between Wofford Cain Hall and Kyle Field before games this year, he said.

Sherrill asked civilian students to form the spirit line at 4:20 p.m. Saturday, Joseph said.
