The question was inevitable and Bill Yung, being the good-natured fellow that he is, didn't dodge it. At least not totally.

On the last two weekends Yung — coach of the Texas-El Paso Miners — has had an up-close look at what are supposed to be two of the better football teams in the country.

Yung's Miners first went to Seattle where they were drubbed by the second-ranked Washington Huskies, 55-0. Then they returned home where they were downed by No. 6 Southern Methodist, 31-10, in a game marred by torrential downpours and nerve-wracking lightning bolts that crackled near the Sun Bowl.

So which team was better? The Huskies or the Mustangs? "Well, I don't know if it's fair to compare," Yung started out moments after losing to SMU Saturday night in El Paso, "because I think we are a much better club now than we were a week ago."

"I don't know if the rain had anything to do with how SMU played (scoring only three points in the second half after the field had been turned into a miniature lake by the monsoon). But it probably did."

"To start with, we should have scored three touchdowns against Washington. So I think their defenses are about even. Washington has a much better passing attack. They do everything. They use all sorts of formations, they use finesse, they took us apart like a surgeon."

"But I think SMU's runners are superior to Washington's runners," he said. "And I think the kicking games are about equal."

Eric Dickerson led the Mustangs with 183 yards rushing, and teammate Craig James had 101 yards.

So if Washington and SMU were to meet tomorrow, it would figure to be quite a game.

The problem, of course, is that they will probably not meet this year. Instead, the Mustangs must deal with a long list of neighborhood foes before they can start thinking about passing Washington and the rest of the teams ahead of them in the national rankings.

And the first of those neighbors comes along next Saturday night in what will be one of the first two Southwest Conference league battles of 1982.

The unbeaten Mustangs will host the disappointed TCU Horned Frogs while the suddenly spunky Texas Tech Red Raiders will be at home against Baylor — which took a week off following its near miss against Ohio State.

TCU comes into its conference opener a 30-19 loser to Kansas in a game that saw F.A. Dry substitute Eddie Clark in at quarterback during the second half in place of Reuben Jones.

Tech, meanwhile, equaled its 1981 win total with a 31-30 squeaker over the Air Force. It came a year and two days since the Raiders' last victory.

The rest of the conference clubs will stay in the intersectional mode next weekend with Houston desperately needing a victory to get some confidence going and Texas A&M has play without its No. 1 running back.

Houston dropped its straight to a tough opponent Saturday night, falling 24-10 to Arizona State. Cougars quarterback Lionel Wilson played spite a still-bothersome ankle injury, coming on in the second quarter after starter Al McMillian could not get the ton going.

The Cougars hope to go on next week against Louisiana Tech.

The Aggies' Johnny Wiley injured his left shoulder at the third quarter of A&M's 22-0 rout of Texas-Arizona Saturday night and he will be at least two weeks. His absence shouldn't matter next week since A&M hosts Louisiana Tech.

Elsewhere next weekend 10 Arkansas will host Mississippi, Texas will try to get unbeat against Missouri in the and the downtrodden Rice must make the trip to LSU.
