through the Texas A&M defense with ease in Saturday's 38-27 Aggie victory in Kyle Field. Nine of Dunigan's teammates weaved in and out of the Aggie defense to receive his 33 completions.

Rather than looking like Bulldogs, the Louisiana Tech receivers looked like a pack of mice feasting on a block of Swiss cheese. Their final receiving totals illustrate that point:

— Mike Sherman, five receptions for 122 yards and one touchdown

— Austin Kattenbraker, seven receptions for 76 yards and one touchdown

— Ronnie Williams, six receptions for 52 yards and one touchdown

— Gerald McDaniel, five receptions for 44 yards

— Chris Tilley, three receptions for 37 yards

— Mike Dellocono, three receptions for 34 yards

— Carlton Jacobs, one reception for 18 yards

— Bruce Lininger, two receptions for 9 yards

— Bobby Fowler, one reception for 4 yards

Sherrill said the Aggies must find consistency in several areas if they are to perform well throughout the conference portion of the schedule. Unfortunately, the time for finding consistency should have been during the first three games, since Texas Tech raids Kyle Field Saturday at 6 p.m. to open Texas A&M's SWC play.

The Aggies, after losing tight end Mark Lewis for the season and running backs Earnest Jackson and Johnny Hector for another two weeks, have averaged 450 yards a game on offense. Thomas Sanders, who sprained an ankle during Texas A&M's second series against the Bulldogs, may return for the Texas Tech game.

Sherrill is pleased with the play of quarterback Gary Kubiak, who has completed 66 of 120 passes for 750 yards and seven touchdowns. But there's also work to be done in that area, he said.

"We're going to have to get more polish in our passing game until the running backs get back," Sherrill said. "When you take Sanders, Hector and Jackson out, you've taken out an awful big chunk of your offense."

Receiver Don Jones, who caught seven of Kubiak's passes for 60 yards, said the Aggies handled Dunigan's passing onslaught well.

"Overall, I think we played a decent game," Jones said. "We played well enough to win, and that's all that counts. Tech proved to be a worthy opponent."

"The secondary played well. People just don't understand that when you have that many passes thrown, some of them are going to be completed."

"I really think the conference teams are in for a little surprise if they think we have a soft defense," he said.

Sophomore offensive lineman Greg Porter said the Bulldog pass rush had strengthened since the Aggies' 43-7 victory in 1981. "Our defense kind of kept us in the ballgame because the offense was slow at first—which is rare," he said. "Tech played well—they have really improved."

Porter said he and his teammates must concentrate on bringing more consistency to both the offense and defense.

"There's always room for improvement, but each individual has to improve as well as the whole team. We have to really get our motors running, and then we'll come around."

whole time," Tilley said. "I think we proved we could play with them."

The Bulldog defense hoped it could help make Dunigan's job easier, but the Aggie offense, almost evenly balanced in running and passing, amassed 469 total yards.

Tech's defenders controlled the Aggie rushing attack in the first half, allowing only 92 yards.

Trey Junkin, a Tech defensive end, said determination was a key factor in keeping Texas A&M from running away with the game on the ground.

"We just decided that they weren't going to gain any yards on the ground and if they were going to beat us they were going to have to go through the air," Junkin said.

"We feel very confident in our rushing defense. We came in here ranked pretty high in our rushing defense and we just decided to shut them down."

Junkin said the Aggies' play-action passes were tough for the Bulldogs to defend since the threat of the run held the defense on the line of scrimmage long enough to provide Kubiak with the time to throw.

Park leads rifle team to first place in invitational tourney

Led by the record shooting of Glenn Park, the Texas A&M rifle team finished ahead of the pack at the University of Texas Invitational in Austin.

Park's score of 378 out of a possible 400 points in the air rifle event earned Team Vandiver—one of the Aggies' two teams—a first-place finish with a total of 1,475 points. The 378 total qualifies Park for an international shooting team as well as for possible All-America recognition.

The Aggies, competing as two teams—Team Hansen and Team Vandiver—won the small bore competition by outshooting the University of Texas-El Paso 2,171 to 2,069. The 2,171 score also gained Texas A&M first place in the half-course (60 shots) category. The University of Texas finished three points behind the Aggies.

For Team Hansen, Park and team captain Todd Woodard scored 550 of a possible 600 points, while Chris Fedun totaled 546 points. Curt Nauck finished with 525 points.

Team Vandiver's 1,475 points outdid by 39 points the effort of Eastern New Mexico Military Academy. Point totals for other members of the team include Woodard and Jerrold Scharninghausen at 370 and Nauck at 357.

Texas A&M is coached by Sgt. Manuel Soto and Maj. Richard M. Pitts is the team's adviser. The Aggies' next competition will be an invitational collegiate match here Oct. 8-10.
