Military tax money hurts most cities

United Press International
WASHINGTON — Two-thirds of the nation's cities — many of them in the economically depressed Frost Belt but some in Texas — lose more money every time military spending is increased because of unequal tax burdens, a new study released Sunday says.

The study, in part of a series by Employment Research Associates of Lansing, Mich., a private economic research firm, examines the impact of defense spending on the nation's 266 major metropolitan areas.

The study, based on 1980 figures from the Tax Foundation and government statistics, compares the "tax burden" of each Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area — the government's term for major urban centers — with Defense Department expenditures in each area.

"Two-thirds of the metropolitan areas of the United States suffer an increasing net loss of tax dollars every time the military budget is increased," said the report titled "Bankrupting American Cities".

"Of the 266 metropolitan areas in the United States, 176 have a net loss in their balance of payments with the Pentagon," it said. Thirteen of the losers are in Texas.

"This situation means the federal government acts as a giant siphon funneling tax money out of 176 metropolitan areas into those which have large military bases or very high military contracts," said Dr. James Anderson of Michigan State University, author of the study.

According to the report, every major industrial state except California has more metropolitan areas that lose than those that gain as a result of military spending. As a state Texas gained overall.

But the industrial heartland — the eight states running westward from New York to Wisconsin — "is being devastated by the military tax drain."

Two states — California and Texas — contain 23 of the 90 metropolitan areas that gain from the Defense Department budget.

Florida has 11 metropolitan areas with net losses, California six; Louisiana, five, and North Carolina, Tennessee, Alabama and Arkansas, four each.

"Among individual metropolitan areas, New York and Chicago experience massive net losses," the report said. "New York will be drained of almost $1 billion in fiscal year 1983 and Chicago will lose over $700 million."

Detroit will lose nearly $1 billion, the report said, as will Houston; Newark, N.J.; San Francisco; Cleveland; San Antonio; Milwaukee; Miami; Kansas City, Mo. will have losses of over $1 billion.

Washington, D.C., the metropolitan area includes the Pentagon and numerous military bases, leads the net gainers with $5.6 billion more in military spending flowing into the area than it pays out to support its share of the Pentagon budget.

Expert says wide choices forcing gasoline price down

United Press International
LOS ANGELES — Oil expert Dan Lundberg says gasoline prices are still falling nationwide, mainly because of a proliferation of cash and credit card choices.

"For so many years, the consumers had a choice of full or self service," Lundberg said. "Now, they have almost double the choices — full-service with credit cards, or cash discount prices, or self-service either credit or cash, for examples.

"The price choices available to motorists today between the average regular leaded at self-service and premium unleaded at full-service is 27.4 cents a gallon," he said.

The semi-monthly Lundberg Survey of dealers in all 50 states showed the average price for all grades and services was $1.26.7 per gallon, down 0.54 cents from the Sept. 11 survey.

Regular unleaded at self-service was stations $125.17, down 0.78 cents and regular leaded was $1.18.29 at self-service, down 0.73, the lowest average that grade has reached in two years, Lundberg said.

Full-service regular leaded was at $1.32.04, down 0.46 cents, and regular unleaded at full-service was $1.37.87, down 0.40.

Regular grades, both leaded and unleaded, account for more than 80 percent of all gasoline sold at retail.
