Hector and Jackson should be able to play against the Cougars. Marshall and Smith will start, but it's probable that both Jackson and Hector will see limited action.

So the Aggies, short-handed in the running back department, may have to once again rely on the most accurate arm in the SWC. Through four games, Kubiak has passed for 1,002 yards and eight touchdowns.

"It's hard to I'd say what'll happen Saturday," Kubiak said. "I'd say if (Hector and Jackson) don't play, we may pass a lot more and if they do, then we might not have to pass as much.

"I feel they'll be in the game, but as for what happens when they hop in there, I don't know. How they play will be the key. I don't take any chances. If they get hurt, because of the game during the

Beer club chugging along

by Mark Coppock
 Battalion Reporter

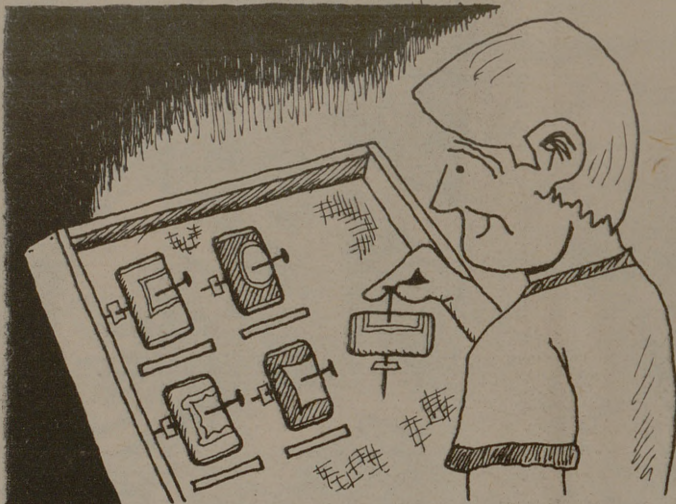

White Rose and Sheridan and Grand Prize and Walter's and Hamm's and Stoney's are all part of "beerophilia" — the focal point of the The Brazos Valley Brewryanna.

The brewryanna is a club designed to get people together who collect beer cans, bottles, openers, trays, signs and other beer-related items. Tom Feehery, a Bryan carpenter and organizer of the club, said seven members joined at the club's first meeting on Sept. 25. He is soliciting new members and said he hopes the club eventually will be a recognized chapter of the Beer Can Collectors of America, a national brewryanna organization — if the club grows to 100 members.

Beer can collecting as a hobby is still in its infancy — it's only been around for about 20 years, Feehery said. He got interested in it in 1974 while selling brewryanna to local bars. He now has over 1000 cans in his collection.

"I want to stress that it is inexpensive to start," he said, although certain cans sell for up to $6,000 at auction.

Old cans and bottles can be found in attics, dumps, garages and just by the side of the road. Feehery said cans have been found between the walls of buildings that have been torn down. Construction workers would finish a beer and put the can inside the wall to avoid being caught drinking on the job, he said.

It is the rarity and condition of a beer item rather than its age that determines its value. Since can designs frequently change, cans now in stores someday could be a valuable.

Feehery recommends opening all cans with a bottle opener from the bottom to keep the top in original condition.

The next monthly meeting and beer can swap of the Brazos Valley Brewryanna will be Oct. 23 at 520 N. Bryan St. in downtown Bryan, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Interested persons should call 779-2274 in the evenings.

Electrolysis: for those who hate their hair

by Michon Breisacher
 Battalion Reporter

Feelin' hairy? You needn't — have that unwanted hair removed permanently.

Electrolysis is the only method of permanent hair removal accepted by the Food and Drug Administration — takes off unwanted hair painlessly and permanently.

Electrolysis is the process of inserting an almost microscopic needle into the hair follicle and applying a small amount of chemical heat to the root of a hair thus destroying the root and preventing the hair from growing back.

Sheela Satya, a Bryan-College Station electrologist, said other methods of hair removal such as neutrolysis and removitan are available, but they are not approved by the Food and Drug Administration.

Tweezing and waxing are common temporary methods of removing unwanted hair, but are time consuming, costly, and sometimes uncomfortable.

Electrolysis was discovered in 1875 by Charles E. Michael, M.D., by treating patients with a wire connected to a dry cell battery.

"There are no punctures, the openings are already there,"

Satya said.

She said electrolysis is such a relaxing process, her patients sometimes fall asleep.

Satya said that patients' ages range from 12 to 80 years of age.

She removes hair from all parts of the body except the eyelids and the inside of the nose. Satya said that many women have treatments on their eyebrows, upper lip, and legs. Men usually have their beards trimmed.

Some causes of unwanted hair are hereditary, some medications, stress, and normal hormonal changes during a person's life.

Treatments last anywhere from 15 minutes for the most sensitive areas such as the upper lip and eyebrows, to an hour for such areas as the legs. The cost of treatment varies with the specific needs of the patient.

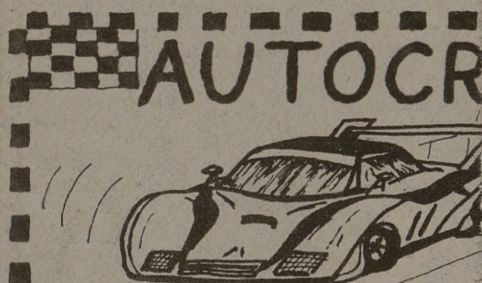

Satya said that she has started her business and is in the process of building her clientele.

She said she hopes to move into a semi-private medical complex soon, but not a mall.

"It's embarrassing to be seen," Satya said. People are willing to talk after they have received treatments, but not before, Satya said.

Restaurant has tasteful food, decor

by Mystery Reviewer

Editor's note: At Ease will review several local restaurants over the course of the year. All reviewers will remain anonymous.

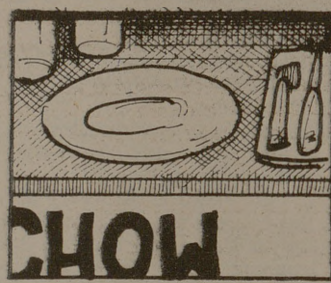

The Pacific Coast Highway Restaurant is not like any other Joe College town restaurant. There is no television in the corner blaring with Martha Quinn and MTV. They don't serve fajitas in a basket or greasy hamburgers.

This is a real restaurant — a three-course, dimly lit, take your time and savor restaurant. If you want to eat and run, go to the nearest hamburger joint. If you want to eat and eat and rest — and then eat some more, come here.

Pacific Coast Highway was built for relaxing. It has lots of open, comfortable space and high ceilings. The tables are well-spaced and there are lots of them — and on a recent Friday night, you didn't even have to wait for one.

The restaurant is decorated tastefully with plants and lots of brightly-colored photographs of the California's Pacific coast. The decor will not likely convince you that you're sipping wine overlooking the Santa Barbara Channel, but for Bryan-College Station it's not a bad try. The restaurant is hidden behind Safeway on E. 29th Street near Villa Maria, but if you go at night, you'll never know the difference.

How much for all this? Surprisingly, the prices aren't bad. A complete dinner for two, with wine and dessert can be had for $25 to $30.

For those on a budget, the Chicken Kiev for $6.95 is satisfactory and comes with salad, rice and vegetable. They also offer a modest selection of seafood dishes and for beef-eaters, the restaurant offers a variety of cuts including prime rib for $11.95. And while the food is not out-of-this-world delicious, the restaurant makes up for it by paying attention to little things.

Pacific Coast Highway also boasts one of the most extensive wine lists in the area — and patrons would be advised to take advantage of the wine list, since the house wine is adequate at best.

All in all, the restaurant is worth the price and one of the finer spots in the area. And for more things, don't wear your jeans and baseball cap, this is a nice place.

For a benefit, anything goes

by Angel Stokes
 Battalion Reporter

Students interested in co-ed contact sports might enjoy entering the 1982 Texas A&M Version of Almost Anything Goes, scheduled for Thursday at 6 p.m. at the Polo Field.

Almost Anything Goes, sponsored by the Residence Hall Association, was originally intended to get dorms together and have fun, said Gaye Denley, director of programs for RHA.

Proceeds from the games go to the United Way.

Everyone is welcome to enter, Denley said. Teams will consist of 10 members each — five women and five men — and are required to pay an entry fee of $10 per team, or one dollar per person.

The winning team will receive custom made T-shirts.

There will be five events where members of each team compete against the clock. The team that uses the least amount of time after the five events are completed will win.

In one game, Squeeze Box, the teams try to cram all its members into a 2-foot-by-2-foot square in a given amount of time.

Another event, No Nubs, is for the brave. Blindfolded male members of a team try to shave the female members' legs. In this event the teams compete against each other and the clock.

Other events are: Dizzy Dash, Whip It and Buddy Beach Ball Carry. The idea for Almost Anything Goes came from the television show by the same name, Denley said.

This year between 15 and 20 teams are expected to enter, Denley said. She said that the $150 donated by RHA was the only money given to the United Way by a Texas A&M student organization last year.

Anyone needing information about registration should call Dana Tucker at 260-6573.

MSC auction to sell what others have lost

by Ann Ramsbottom
 Battalion Reporter

Whether you're looking for a bargain or just some good-old-fashioned entertainment, the MSC lounge is the place to be Wednesday.

"Unclaimed lost and found items collected on campus over the past year will be auctioned off to the highest bidder," said Rena Koester, an advisor in the Students Program Office.

The auction is from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the MSC lounge. Items to be auctioned off include jewelry, calculators, books, sports equipment and backpacks, said Chris Poe, who is working on lost and found project. These articles will be on display beginning at 9 a.m. Wednesday morning.

The items to be sold have been in the lost and found storage area for more than six months, Poe said. Items of substantial value will be removed from collection and taken to the police station Wednesday morning.

Koester said the auction brought in over $3,000 last year. All the proceeds are distributed evenly among the MSC student program committees. Those not interested in making a purchase are still invited to come and watch the auction. The auction benefits the committees and creates a fun atmosphere on campus at the same time, Koester said.
