Aggies

Hector and Jackson should be able to play against the Cougars. Marshall and Smith will start, but it's probable that both Jackson and Hector will see limited action.

So the Aggies, short-handed in the running back department, may have to once again rely on the most accurate arm in the SWC. Through four games, Kubiak has passed for 1,002 yards and eight touchdowns.

"It's hard to say what'll happen Saturday," Kubiak said. "I'd say if (Hector and Jackson) don't play, we may pass a lot more and if they do, then we might not have to pass as much."

"I feel they'll be in the game. Wiggins has compiled 350 yards but as for what happens when and has scored four touchdowns. How they be the key, take any hurt, because during the

Technician makes big crimes little

by United Press International
NEW YORK—Marie Venticicque, a former nun and school teacher, has collected under one roof the crime scenes of the John Lennon killing, the Jack Henry Abbott case and dozens of other murders. They look quite realistic — for miniatures.

Venticicque, 37, now is a technical engineer with Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau, is one of three people in an office that turns out hundreds of scale replicas of crime scenes that illustrate cases for trial juries.

"We make them as simple as possible," she explains, referring to the miniatures usually constructed of cardboard or balsa wood.

She points to the model of the spot where a cop was shot and killed with his own gun. "We use black and white and earthy colors. We don't want to confuse the jury."

The model of the cop shooting scene, a three-quarter-inch scale version of part of Columbus Circle in Manhattan, is done in tan and gray.

"You see the defendant came out this way," Venticicque says, tracing the steps of the gunman. "On that traffic island, there was someone on the bench there," she says, describing where a witness to the slaying sat.

In another case, Venticicque was asked to build a model of a closet with a false wall and secret compartment.

"The defendant hid in there for months," she said showing off the model closet that looks just right for the wardrobe of Barbie and Ken, but the killer is no doll. He was convicted in a double-homicide.

Venticicque has been assigned to several interesting cases. They include the John Lennon shooting at the Dakota building and the Jack Abbott case, in which the jailhouse author was convicted of killing Richard Adan at a Binobon cafe.

Venticicque opens a closet full of drawings and sketches and displays a huge floor plan of the Binobon, pinpointing where people sat on the day of the killing.

What about the Lennon case? Ms. Venticicque takes from the top of a closet the miniature she is assembling of the famed Dakota Apartments, where Lennon was shot and killed Dec. 8, 1980.

"I never finished it because the case never went to trial," she says. "I would like to finish it."

After all, she went through much trouble trying to get the plans for the building.

"Nobody seemed to have the plans. I don't think the plans exist anymore. I finally got some plans from a company that was doing renovation work on the building," she says. She also did some of her own surveying as she does in all the cases that are handed to her.

"Maybe I'll finish it in my spare time," said Venticicque, who added that once the model is completed she will take it home.

Life hasn't always been murders and miniatures for Venticicque.

She was once a nun, but left the convent in 1970. Later, she was a school teacher in the Bronx but was laid off because of budget cuts.

"I had a friend who went to New York City Technical College, and I helped her do her drawings," she said.

She then spent two years at the Brooklyn school herself because she liked the work. Then, the opening at Morgenthau's office came up.
