The College Station Parks and Recreation Board Tuesday rejected the 2.5-acre tract proposed for a park in the Emerald Forest area, asking for a better location.

Central Park on either side of Appomattox Street. The Emerald Forest area was rejected because the land would be too difficult to develop, Chairman Stephen Biles said. "If we accept this we would be between people's backyards, the sewer plant and high power lines," Biles said.

The new area would be easier to get to and would be on a better tract of land. The board will submit the request to Allen Swoboda, developer for the Emerald Forest area, for approval. Swoboda is dedicating the land in compliance with the city's subdivision ordinance which requires a developer to donate one acre for every 133 dwelling units developed.

Steve Beachy, parks and recreation administrator, said placement of the park has been under deliberation for about four years. The board also discussed development of land in the Northgate area off Wellborn Road near Church Avenue. The area is the site of the old city hall building.

Meat lab building to relieve crowding at

by Kathy Breard

Students taking meat laboratory courses will soon be treated to a change from the 50-year-old Animal Industries Building. Conditions should be less cramped in a few months, after completion of the new meat science building.

The building, located on west campus next to the Kleberg Animal and Food Science Center, will rank among the best meat science facilities in the nation, Ray Riley, manager of the meat laboratory, said. The building will be for retail sales and a modernized training program for students.

However, the new meat science and technology center won't be ready for business until the start of next year, said Dr. Jeff Savell, an assistant professor associated with the construction and design of the facility.

"We think of it as more of a center of science and technology — and not just a laboratory," Savell said. "The old building is really antiquated for the technology now being used." The new center will use more students as part of the training program. Students enrolled in the College of Agriculture, as well as those in related animal science courses, learn to evaluate retail cuts of meat in the program. They also learn about the cutting, packaging and manufacturing of meat products.

Riley said such knowledge can lead to careers in grading, meat sales, purchasing and agricultural management. The center will have a retail counter to retail meat, ice cream, eggs and eggs. Savell said the products are the result of teaching and research from students. The business is primarily self-service. "This is a way of bringing even," Riley said. "Teaching and evaluation have to do something with product."

UT-A financial aid official investigated

United Press International
ARLINGTON — Investigators will give the district attorney a detailed report on a University of Texas at Arlington administrator arrested in connection with a bribery probe at the school.

William C. Johnson, UT-A assistant director of financial aid, was arrested Friday, said UT-A Police Chief J.D. McGee. Johnson was advised of his rights and released without bond.

Johnson and other school officials refused to discuss the nature of the probe. Other sources said the investigation involved reports that students were asked to "kick part of the financial aid" received.

Stagecoach accident injures three at fair

United Press International
DALLAS — A girl was hospitalized and two others injured when a crackling fireworks display spooked a team of horses who bolted across crowded state fair grounds trailing a stagecoach packed with tourists.

The coach slammed into a shuttle bus and a tram before its driver forced the vehicle into a tree. All were taken to Parkland Memorial Hospital following the 7:50 p.m. incident Monday. Renee Dickerson, 7, was admitted in fair condition with a broken arm; the others, treated and released, were identified as Marie Justice, 20; and Matthew Kincaid, 15, officials Tuesday.

Dallas police officer Billman said the injuries were relatively minor and that the six horses was not hurt. The coach, owned by a try-western radio station, parked by the fairgrounds bandshell for a concert when team bolted at the blast of a fireworks display.
