raised almost $12 million in his re-election effort while easily spending twice as much as Democrat Mark White.

Campaign finance reports filed Tuesday revealed that Clements, a wealthy Dallas oil drilling executive, raised a record-setting $11.8 million for his campaign and spent $11.4 million.

White's report showed contributions of $6.4 million for the entire campaign and expenditures of $5.2 million.

"Bill Clements isn't going to be able to hide behind $12 million," responded White. "The people of Texas realize that while Clements gets the prime rate, they're having to pay 24 percent on their credit accounts."

For the accounting period of Sept. 24 through Oct. 23, Clements raised $2.5 million, including a $1.9 million loan guaranteed by himself, and spent $3.2 million.

During the same month-long period, White raised $1.4 million, including loans totalling $696,830, and spent $1.8 million.

Jim Francis, Clements' campaign manager, said 52,177 persons have given money to Clements' campaign for an average contribution of $191.

"The number of contributions in this campaign is unprecedented in Texas politics," Francis said. "No candidate in any race has ever received this degree of broad-based support from the people of Texas."

Other statewide candidates filing statements for the same 30-day period were:

Allen Clark, Republican treasurer candidate, raised $242,570 and spent $237,869. Fort Worth millionaire Eddy

Chiles accounted for a third of Clark's donations, a cash contribution of $81,874 and spent $75,000.

Ann Richards, Democratic treasurer candidate, raised $286,828 and spent $177,000.

Bob Bullock, Democratic incumbent comptroller, raised $181,874 and spent $177,000.

Mike Richards, Republican comptroller candidate, raised $429,967 (including $100,000 in loans) and spent $177,000.

George Strake, lieutenant governor candidate, raised $1.2 million in loans and $950,000 in loans and $1.4 million. Total to date million in contributions $2.92 million in expenses.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Democratic incumbent, raised $1 million and spent $1.1 million.

'Candy Man' poisoner to die on Halloween

United Press International
HOUSTON — The lawyer who originally defended "Candy Man" killer Ronald Clark O'Bryan on charges he poisoned his son with Halloween candy maintains O'Bryan is innocent of the killing and could prove it through a lie detector test.

O'Bryan faces execution Halloween night — eight years after his son's death. The inmate's request for a stay of execution is pending with the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

"He didn't do it," said attorney Richard E. Harrison of Dallas. "I suggested before the trial he be given a lie detector test, but they wouldn't."

Harrison said police in the Houston suburb of Pasadena refused to give O'Bryan a lie detector test in 1974 after he was arrested and charged with substituting cyanide crystals for powdery candy in the "Giant Pixie Stix" given to Timothy Marc O'Bryan, 8.

The boy died of cyanide poisoning an hour after eating the substance in his father's presence. Four other children found with the poisoned candy did not eat it.

O'Bryan, 38, has maintained his innocence. Taunted by fellow death row inmates as the "Candy Man," O'Bryan is scheduled to die by injection at 12:01 Sunday.

Prosecutors claimed O'Bryan killed his son to collect on a $20,000 insurance policy.

Harrison said public pressure on the Pasadena police to find a culprit caused them to choose O'Bryan and fit the evidence to him.

"The real killer was never found," he said. "He (O'Bryan) was at the center of national attention. They (the police) made him make statements during the investigation that he was not sure of. They confused him. And people around him were convinced he was guilty." Pasadena Police Department

Capt. Sidney Smith, who disagreed with Harrison that a lie detector test would prove O'Bryan's innocence, said a lie detector test does not work on such a "because he doesn't want to draw the crowd's attention floor, but it's the newest fad, and the country as the O'Bryan's wife at Daylene, testified as a husband. Harrison said just repeating information by the police.

"She hated his guts," Smith said.

Smith was O'Bryan's attorney before the 5th Circuit court.

O'Bryan at the time needed money and wanted to support his family, he could.

"Absurd. What are you saying? Kill one kid and others with the insurance from his death? Absurd," said.

EXERCITEMENT!

BODY DYNAMICS is proud to announce the opening of an exciting new exercise studio in College Station.

Beginning November 1 in the Post Oak Village Shopping Center, BODY DYNAMICS classes will be offered which provide aerobic and body-shaping exercise which is not only effective but fun. Taught by professionally trained instructors, the classes include stretching, aerobic conditioning and floor exercises, all set to lively music which keeps you moving throughout the period. Three levels of instruction--beginner, intermediate and advanced--guarantee that everyone can find a level which is accessible yet challenging.

Classes will be taught throughout the day, seven days a week. A member can work out as often as desired, at whichever times are convenient. (Special ten-class limited memberships are also available.) Memberships may be suspended for a week or more so that a member who leaves town or is unable to exercise for a while does not lose any time on her membership.
