Scientists find cancer genes

United Press International
NEW YORK — Scientists from Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center tracking after potential cancer genes have found two on a chromosome that's abnormally rearranged in several cancers.

It's the latest report in a burgeoning area of genetic research by scientists seeking the causes of cancer.

There may be more than 100,000 genes in a single cell, each directing the manufacture of one or another body substance. Genes are arranged along chromosomes, which are minute thread-like structures.

Even though each human cell contains the full complement of 46 chromosomes, all the genetic instructions for a complete human being, only a small percentage of genes are turned on in any one cell at any point in its life cycle.

Cancer genes seem to be normal genes. Though scientists do not know precisely which genes are responsible for cancer, there is general agreement that they play a role in the growth and proliferation of cells.

The fact that potential cancer genes exist in so many life forms suggests that their functions are so important that they have remained a part of the gene pool virtually through evolution, scientists say.

The Sloan-Kettering center, headed by Dr. William S. Hayward, has identified the suspect cancer genes and C-mos. Normal genes are located at the precise spots where cancer-related genes occur in a chromosome.

Scientists at Sloan-Kettering reported these breaks in chromosome 8 have long been associated with a type of blood cancer called acute nonlymphocytic leukemia; Burkitt's lymphoma, which is a lymph cancer rarely seen in Africa; other lymph tissue malignancies; hereditary predisposition leads to kidney cancer.

Are you wondering about when to get an MBA?
Talk to us.

More and more, recent college graduates think they should go straight into a job. We think that's not always the case. The 25% of our student body who has come without fulltime work experience agrees. Still, there are 75% of our students who have worked fulltime for almost three years, who think their experience has made all the difference in how they approach their graduate management training. We'll be glad to discuss what you think.

Our toll-free number is open and we're ready to talk. Give us a call.
