Female guard found stabbed

United Press International
GALVESTON — Police set up road blocks to monitor traffic from Pelican Island to Galveston Tuesday in their search for an 18-year-old suspect in the murder of a female security guard, investigators say.

Galveston Police Sgt. J. Rice said Barbara Jean Whiteley, 57, an employee of Delphi Guard Service, Inc., was found dead about 2 a.m. Tuesday at a Shell Oil terminal on Pelican Island.

He said the woman was almost decapitated from a throat slashing and her body was stabbed numerous times.

Whiteley had phoned police dispatchers earlier Monday night to report a minor accident which involved a rental truck. Investigators found a blood-stained wrecked rental truck several miles from the scene of the killing and immediately began a search for the driver.

"It's our belief that the person that had charge of this truck was at her location because the license number of the truck was written down on her pad," Rice said.

"There was blood on the inside of the truck, but we don't know if it was her blood."

Investigators theorized the driver of the truck initially fled the scene of the accident and later returned and killed the security guard.

Whiteley's body was discovered near the security shack where she checked license plate numbers of cars going into the complex. She was in uniform and unarmed.

Man sues University Park police over choke-hold use

United Press International
DALLAS — A man who claims a University Park policeman broke his jaw, shattered several teeth and nearly caused his tongue to be severed by using a choke hold, has filed a $7 million lawsuit against the officer and the suburban Dallas police department.

The civil suit, filed in federal court by James V. Margiotta, 28, claims officer L.C. Schoolcraft used the hold after stopping Margiotta for speeding Oct. 28 near Southern Methodist University.

Margiotta's attorney, Paul F. Carnes, said the officer "got angry" when Margiotta approached the patrol car to dispute the reading. Schoolcraft applied the hold when Margiotta instinctively moved his right arm, Carnes said.

The choke hold involves grabbing a person around the neck from behind, cutting the flow of blood to the brain, oxygen to the lungs to force victim unconscious.

The suit, filed Monday, claims Margiotta regained consciousness about a half hour and found himself "lying on his back in a pool of blood" with his hands handcuffed behind his back.

University Park Police Officer David Beidelman called the "unbelievable."
