Part-time secretary is full-time skier

United Press International

NEW YORK — Spring, summer and fall, Mary Jo Berscheit is a prim legal secretary. Come November, she quits to go skiing — all winter long.

"It took a lot of courage when I first quit my job — all that security, good retirement program," she said. "But I'd been thinking about just going skiing for a whole winter for six years. And then, when once I quit it, well, I've been quitting jobs once a year now for 12 years.

She often returns to the same law firm and "When I quit, they say, 'When are you coming back?' I say, 'I'll call you.' When I call they say, 'When are you coming back to work?"

It works out very well, she says, because most legal secretaries want to take their vacations in the summer and she becomes a replacement for them.

"I feel like I've been on a vacation for 12 years."

It has settled into a simple routine. She owns a condominium in Aspen which she rents while in New York, and shares an apartment in Manhattan with a roommate who looks after it while she's skiing. "I can travel between the two with two small suitcases.

"My ski clothes are out there on the hangar all ready to go. My ski equipment is in the locker in the basement."

She's written a book about her love affair with skiing, "Joy on the Mountain" (Pitkin Press, Aspen, Colo.). No howto-ski book this, it's a peon to the thrills and glories of skiing.

"I wanted to tell people who might never get on skis just how wonderful it is," she said.

Of her first day at Snowmass in Aspen, she writes, "Darting and swooping where I would, I skimmed downward. Plumes of snow, the white wings of my feet, shot upward and outward from my skis. Feathery soft spray rose up and tickled my face. Joy, like a fountain bubbled up within me."

But skiing every day all winter long, does it never become boring?

"No. Well, yes, it might, I confess, if I didn't have my teaching. I love teaching with a passion — sharing the successes of my students.

"Sometimes I think, when there's great powder, I'd like to take a whole day off for free skiing. But if I did, I'd probably find somebody on the mountain who needed help and give them a hand."

In all, Miss Bercheit has been skiing 22 years — and teaching 20 of them. She began with bus trips to mountains close to New York and quickly became an instructor. Six years later she threw over her job and took off for a winter of skiing at Aspen. She has been teaching there each winter since.

She does have a few tips for the would-be beginner.

—Don't go out and buy new equipment before you start. Rent it until you know the kind of equipment you need and whether you are going to stay with skiing.

—First three days skiing, at least, take lessons. Don't just try to ski without them.

—Do tell your instructor how you feel. Some beginners are fearful, others gung ho for anything. This way, the instructor will be able to help you more.
