Doctors implant plastic heart designed for lifelong use

United Press International
SALT LAKE CITY — University of Utah surgeons replaced the dying heart of Barney Clark, 61, Thursday with the first artificial heart designed to support human life indefinitely.

Dr. Chase Peterson said three problems were overcome during the operation and the plastic heart, powered by an external air compressor, had started beating and was maintaining the life of Clark, a Seattle dentist.

"It is operating satisfactorily," said Peterson, university vice president for medical services.

Doctors planned to monitor the pump's operation for awhile before closing the incision in Clark's chest.

The history-making operation was a last-ditch effort to save Clark's life.

The successful weaning of Clark from a standard heart-lung machine was a major step in the procedure and left the mechanical heart as the sole supporter of Clark's circulatory system.

The operation means Clark must be connected for the rest of his life by two tubes to the portable external air compressor running the implanted device.

Peterson likened it to being "tethered to a grocery cart."

MX cuts fail in committee

United Press International
WASHINGTON — The administration Thursday defeated efforts by congressional opponents of the MX missile to cut money for production of the new intercontinental weapon, gaining a 26-26 tie in a crucial House committee.

The vote by the House Appropriations Committee followed intense lobbying by President Reagan, who called several committee members while making an official visit to South America.

The panel also voted to continue funding for the Air Force's bomber and two new nuclear aircraft carriers for the year as it approved a $231.6 billion defense appropriation bill in 1983.

The move to block production of the MX was led by Rep. Joseph Addabbo, D-N.Y., who also failed in his effort to cut funding for the B-1 and to cut one nuclear carrier.

Addabbo's amendment was on the verge of winning on a 26-25 vote when Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Ark., who had passed when his name was first called, voted "no" at the end of the roll call. The amendment then failed on the tie vote.

The full defense appropri-tions bill, expected to reach the House floor next week, represents a cut of about 7.2 percent from the administration's request.
