

Kubiak leads West to TD's in losing Hula Bowl effort

United Press International
HONOLULU — Curt Warner of Penn State ran for two touchdowns and Dan Marino of the Dallas Cowboys and Minnesota's Mike Hohensee each passed for a touchdown Saturday to lead the East to a 30-14 victory over the turnover-plagued West in the Hula Bowl.

Gary Kubiak led the West to two TD's in Hula Bowl

Warner, a second team All-America, plunged over from the 25-yard line in the second quarter and capped the East's scoring for the day with a 6-yard touchdown in the final quarter. For the time, Warner picked up 91 yards on 18 carries.

Hohensee hooked up with Notre Dame's Tony Hunter on a 14-yard scoring play in the second period while Marino, the game's outstanding offensive player, hit Tennessee's Willy Gault from nine yards out to cap a 99-yard drive in the third period. Dana Moore of Mississippi State completed the East's scoring with an opening-period 30-yard field goal. Marino was voted outstanding offensive player of the game despite a stellar performance by Texas A&M quarterback Gary Kubiak. Kubiak, who was second team all-Southwest Conference and who wasn't even the West's starting quarterback, completed 14 of 20 passes for one touchdown and 181 yards.

Three of the East's scores followed fumble recoveries. The West's points came on a 2-yard run by Jessie Clark of Arkansas and a 12-yard pass from Kubiak to SMU's Eric Dickerson in the closing seconds of the game. Chris Faulkner caught 5 passes for 64 yards and Gault four for 85 yards. Dickerson, who finished third in the Heisman trophy balloting, was the West's leading rusher with 28 yards on 10 carries.

The game was nationally televised on NBC, and a crowd of 39,456 watched the game in person. The Hula Bowl and the East-West Shrine game, also played Saturday, closed out the 1982-83 college football season.

Marino, the No. 1 pick in the USFL's draft, completed 12 of 22 for 156 yards. Kubiak was not selected in the draft. However, this performance — along with his performance in the Blue-Gray game — may have helped his chances of being an NFL draft choice considerably.

Shakir sank both free throws to cut the Aggies' lead to 66-57.

With Gilbert, Riley and Henry on the bench, the Aggies lost most of their rebounding strength, and the Bears made the most of it. Baylor hit two jump shots to take it 68-62, and with 17 seconds left Shakir sank two free throws to cut the Aggie lead to 68-66.

Baylor's Craig Kaiser then fouled Naulls in an attempt to get the ball back, and after Naulls missed the free throw, the Bears brought the ball downcourt but missed three straight shots. Baucham grabbed the rebound of the third shot and scored at the buzzer to make it 68-66. Naulls, who led the Aggies with 17 points and five assists, hinted that the Bears' comeback was perhaps as much the Aggies' fault as it was Baylor's.

"Sometimes," Naulls said, "when you get ahead, you play not to lose instead of trying to win. I think that's what happened tonight, because we hesitated on several shots we should have taken."

"We made some mistakes — I made some mistakes — but everybody kept their heads up."

The Bears did a good defensive job on Riley, holding him to just eight points and eight rebounds. In doing so, however, they allowed someone else to take up the slack.

"I call it 'pass to the jersey,'" Riley said. "Just pass to the open man. If somebody scores 40 points and everybody else scores two and you lose, you lose. It's still which team scores the most points at the end of the game.

And that's all that counts." Still, Riley is having trouble getting the ball.

"A lot of defenses are concentrating on me," Riley said. "You know, always denying me the ball. But tonight I got some help from my teammates. I got some picks and stuff that helped me get a few jump shots off."

Aggie Coach Shelby Metcalf said it best.

"If Claude draws a crowd," Metcalf said, "then somebody's got to be open."

Metcalf said he was most pleased with the Aggies' defense, but he added: "I was least pleased with our rebounding in the last five minutes. But with our rebounders sitting over with me..."

Metcalf was referring to the fact that Gilbert, McHenry and Riley had all fouled out.

Riley said the Aggies' 66-64 loss to Arkansas helped prepare them to meet Baylor.

"We went over some things (after the loss)," Riley said. "But the main thing was we were constantly alert when they would press us. We were prepared when they began to press, and we stayed alert, so the press wouldn't affect us."

"That's the mark of a good ballclub. We saw our mistakes and corrected them."

And surprised 9,850 people. Not to mention Eddie Sutton.

Hogs, Coogs top SWC hoop action

United Press International
Moments after Eddie Sutton secured his 200th victory as coach of the Arkansas Razorbacks, he was asked whether he remembered every one of those

"No," he said. "But I remember the 51 losses."

Win or lose, however, Sutton will likely remember Arkansas' game next Saturday for quite a while.

The Razorbacks, unbeaten in 11 games this season, ranked 15th in the country and possibly headed for a higher spot next week, will take on Houston Saturday night at the Cougars' Theinz Pavilion.

Houston goes into tonight's game with Texas Tech leading a 4-0 Southwest Conference record (and a No. 13 national ranking) while Arkansas is

Thus far this season the Cougars have looked untouchable on some evenings and suspect on others. Arkansas, as is its habit, has coasted along on an even course although a soft intersectional schedule left some wondering about the Razorbacks' true worth.

Arkansas, however, rolled through Texas for the first time last week and survived with two tough wins over Texas A&M and SMU. And the Razorbacks should face a good pre-Houston test Wednesday night when they host TCU (3-1 in league play and 12-3 overall).

Other than the critical matchup at the top of the SWC standings, this will be a key week for two members of the conference's middle group of teams.

SMU and Baylor, both of which hope to make enough ripples during the conference season to catch the eye of a post-season tournament, meet each other in Dallas Tuesday night and then on Saturday evening Baylor faces TCU in Fort Worth and SMU takes on Texas A&M in College Station.
