Contest keeps three at top

Billboard men won't quit

United Press International
ALLEN TOWN, Pa.— Three men in their 145th day of living on the edge of a billboard have refused to come down, despite the year's worst snowstorm and their ambivalence about the grueling contest that's keeping them up there.
 The three, one of whom has spent one-third of his year-and-a-half marriage on the billboard, said Friday that they have considered calling the contest quits and splitting the profits, including the top prize for the last one on the billboard — an $18,000 mobile home offered by WSAN and Love Mobile Homes, both of Allentown.

 "Right now there is not enough to split," Ron Kistler, 25, said. "You sell the house and pay taxes and there's not that much left. We talked about it but decided not now."
 "We're getting along pretty good," he continued. "It's more us against the radio station than against each other. The radio station is sort of the guy on top with all the money, and we are sort of three little guys."
 "We've become friends up here," said Mike MacKay, 30. "We're getting along. We've formed a union, the Billboard Sitters of America, Allentown Chapter No. 1. I expect at this point it's going to go a long way, a couple of years."

 Kistler, along with MacKay and Dalton Young, 22, set up housekeeping on the billboard catwalk adjacent to Interstate 22. Under contest rules, they can't leave the billboard or have visitors closer than 12 feet or they will be eliminated.
 To brave the 24 inches of snow predicted to fall in Allentown by Monday, they are equipped with telephones, space heaters, insulated tents, cold weather sleeping bags, radio portable toilets and other amenities.

 MacKay, who is married, said that he has an indefinite leave absence from his job as a counselor in a group home for the retarded, but he admitted the separation from his wife is tough.
 "I certainly miss her," he said. "It is a slight strain on our marriage, despite how positive she is, it has been a strain."
 MacKay's wife, Linda, supports her husband and says she wants him to come down only if he has the house.

Fireball called a prank

NEW ORLEANS — NASA officials are dismissing as a student hoax a blazing fireball that professors feared had plummeted onto the University of New Orleans campus from outer space.

 NASA deputy manager F. Edward Williams said the "junk" did not fall onto the lakefront campus but was constructed by some college student who wanted to liven up a dull evening.

made it so realistic."
