Corps growth assured under 'two conditions'

by Patti Schwierzke
Battalion Staff
In a discussion with the new Corps of Cadets officers, the deputy Corps commander-designate said the Corps of Cadets will continue to grow as long as President Reagan increases the defense budget, and the United States avoids Vietnam-type situations.
Preston Abbott, who will succeed Mike Holmes as corps commander at Final Review in May, was named to the position Wednesday night. Brian Terrell will serve as Deputy Commander under Abbott. Terrell succeeds Ronnie Taylor.
"We will grow with national patriotism," Terrell said. "As long as Reagan increases the defense budget, and we keep out of Vietnam situations, then the Corps will grow."
Abbott, a junior petroleum engineering major from Longview, and Terrell, a junior agricultural economics major from Plainview, said they were not surprised by their appointments, but they feel fortunate that they were selected.

The selection process began two weeks ago when nine cadets were nominated for corps commander. The candidates were interviewed by Corps advisers Feb. 10. The appointments were not announced until Wednesday.
"Now, we have to start planning for next year," Abbott said. "We have a lot of work to do."
"My job is to represent the Corps for the University and to represent the University. We are the keeper of traditions, but without the support of civilians, Texas A&M will not go anywhere," he said.
Terrell agrees with Abbott about the role of the Corps.
"We are a big part of the University's public relations," Terrell said. "We do things in support of the University whether it's going to Mardi Gras or to the governor's inauguration.

"We (support tradition and represent the University) by example, not as a police force. When we start telling others what to do, then we are paddling backwards."
"My job is to direct Corps Staff and to support Preston. I'm also in charge of the financial aspect of the Corps, in charge of discipline and the special units," said Terrell.
Abbott and Terrell think that Texas A&M benefits from the combination of civilians and cadets.
Abbott said, "I like Texas A&M the way it is. That is what makes our ROTC program so much better than others. We get to know all kinds of people, both military and non-military. It makes us more open-minded. We get the best of both worlds."
"Our main goal is to produce good military officers and good citizens," Abbott said.

A&M engineer will travel to Germany this summer

by Leigh-Ellen Clark

There's a big world beyond final exams, and the associate dean of engineering says he wants students to see it in relation to their field of study.
Fifty Texas A&M engineering students will get to see the German industrial and cultural portions of the world from May 12 to 30 during a European exchange program with Ruhr University-Bochum in Germany. Round trip airfare, bus transportation, industrial and cultural tours and room and board will cost about $1,000.

German families will adopt Texas A&M students for two weeks of the tour and share a side of culture not found in the engineering lab. Dr. L.S. Fletcher, associate dean of engineering, said.
"The families do speak English and are anxious to practice and get to know our students," he said.
Classes and laboratories at Ruhr University-Bochum are open to Texas A&M students. Each Aggie will be assigned a versity and student social life.

"Those who travelled with us last year matured a great deal," Fletcher said. "They found they didn't know enough about their country. Most of us feel we really know our government and industry until someone from another country asks about them."

Although the curriculum is geared toward the engineering student, applied science majors might be interested in the program, he said.
Students will tour the Delta-works in Southern Holland and Phillips Lamp in Eindhoven.

They also will observe the Opel Assembly Plant and Krupp Steel Works in Bochum.

Tours of castles and vineyards on the Rhine, the cathedral in Cologne, the 15th and 16th Century Industrial Museum, and a visit to the birthplace of Beethoven in Bonn are tentatively scheduled.

A week at the end of the tour will be reserved for students who want to travel on their own or stay with their adopted families in Bochum, Fletcher said.

"Several students took the opportunity to see the world by bus or train," he said. Everyone will meet in Amsterdam, Holland to return to the United States on May 30.

There are 50 spaces available and selection is based on application and interview. Application deadline is March 1 with a $100 deposit due as soon as possible. The full amount for the trip is due April 12. For more information contact Fletcher at the engineering dean's office.

Business denied location by CS Zoning commission

by Wanda Winkler
Battalion Reporter
After lengthy discussion Thursday evening, the College Station Planning and Zoning Commission denied a business from the residential area to locate at the corner of Texas Avenue and Richards Street. It was the third time the commission refused to allow a business at this intersection.
Al Mayo, city planner, said the proposed dentist office would force future rezoning of the property to a commercial area. A high commercial price prevents houses from being built on Texas Avenue, he said.

Previously, an attorney-real estate office and a chiropractic office were not allowed at the intersection, Mayo said, because area homeowners were opposed.
At the meeting, two representatives from the community said the property was not suitable for a business because it unfairly invaded on their community. They felt that added traffic would also be a problem for the area.
Grant Wolfe said his dental office, a buffer between the traffic and the community, would be beneficial in keeping neighborhood children a safe distance from heavy traffic. A petition of 23 supportive people living within two blocks of the intersection was presented to the zoning commission by Wolfe.

The commission granted land use in the Windwood Subdivision, which is south of Highway 30, for Aldersgate United Methodist Church. A church representative promised that lighting from the church parking lot would not annoy homeowners in the Windwood Subdivision.
