

— NY wins on last-second dunk

Knicks edge Mavs, 108-106

United Press International
NEW YORK — Bill Cartwright doesn't fool around when he puts in a backbreaking effort.

"I hurt my lower back on that last play," Cartwright said after his dunk with six seconds left lifted the New York Knicks Tuesday night to a 108-106 victory over the Dallas Mavericks. "I'm hurting a little right now, but when you see an opportunity like that, you love it. You just want it again. I'm alright, though."

With the score 106-106, New York's Paul Westphal took the ball at halfcourt, faked Elston Turner and drove the lane. His layup bounced off the rim and Cartwright slammed it in to give the Knicks their fifth straight triumph at home and 11th victory in their last 14 games. Jay Vincent of Dallas missed a baseline jumper with two seconds left.

"It was a delay play by Paul Westphal," said Cartwright, who also led the Knicks with 20 points. "Ideally, Paul is supposed to drive to the basket with six seconds left. If he is double teamed, then someone will help out on a wing or he could drive it out the post. He missed the shot, I caught it and drove it to the hoop.

"I didn't see anyone in front of me blocking me out, which is just fine."

Dallas Coach Dick Motta blamed the loss on his team's inability to keep Cartwright in check.

"They beat us inside," Motta said. "We couldn't control Cartwright underneath. We haven't played well since the All-Star game. We've won one and given two away."

The Knicks trailed from early in the second quarter until Marvin Webster tied it 85-85 with just under 9:00 left. Sly Williams put the Knicks ahead 106-104 with 49 seconds left. Bill Garnett connected for Dallas with 25 seconds remaining to make it 106-106 before New York called a timeout and set up the game-winner.

Bernard King added 18 for the Knicks, Westphal 15 and Williams 14. For Dallas, Vincent and Mark Aguirre each scored 25 points, Kelvin Ransey had 14 and Rolando Blackman 12.

Dallas led 82-77 after three quarters with Aguirre scoring 12 in the third quarter and Vincent eight. The Mavericks were ahead 51-48 at the half as Ransey collected 10 points in the second quarter. The Knicks held a 30-24 lead after one quarter, getting seven points from Truck Robinson and six from Westphal.

New York Coach Hubie Brown said he was counting on Westphal to beat his man and score, but he was happy with the outcome anyway.

"During the timeout (with 20 seconds left), we wanted to discuss the plays which were good for us tonight. We wanted Westphal to drive with six seconds left on the clock, but fortunately, he left with eight seconds left. Westphal just blew right by the guy (Elston Turner) guarding him and he got and he got into the lane fast. I was very elated with what happened."

"There are all kinds of ways to play the last shot. No one should really critique or second guess."

Gunning for a victory

Freshman pitcher Scott Deskins guns one home in a recent practice session at Olsen Field. Deskins and the Aggie baseball team are in San Antonio today to face St. Mary's in a doubleheader. Texas A&M's next stand will be Friday and Saturday when the Aggies face Hart Simmons University.
