

Increased awareness is meeting goal

Outdoor recreation seminar set

A five-day conference designed to increase awareness of outdoor recreation and environmental issues is being sponsored by the Memorial Student Center Outdoor Recreation Committee beginning March 2.

The second annual Outdoor Horizons Conference will include exhibits and programs on topics as diverse as outdoor photography and endangered species.

"This is a good conference for everyone," says Victoria Albaugh, chairman of the conference. "You don't have to be involved in outdoor recreation. The exhibits are the kind that people can just browse through and enjoy, and the topics of the seminars vary from technical information to general subjects that involve everyone."

Registration for the conference begins Monday, Feb. 28, in the main hall of the MSC and will cost $5 for students and $10 for non-students. Tickets for individual seminars and programs can be purchased at the door.

Albaugh says she expects at least 100 to 150 participants this year. Students, faculty, representatives from local scout troops and participants from around the state attended the conference last year.

Speakers for the conference include:
• Paul Pedzoldt, executive director of the Wilderness Education Association and one of the founders of the Outward Bound program.
• Ken Kramer, state legislative chairman for the Sierra Club and president of the Texas Environmental Coalition.
• Roy Smith, instructor for Colorado Outward Bound's Western Wilderness Program and director of the Crested Butte Mountain Institute.
• Dr. Mildred Little, director of the Texas A&M Outdoor Education Institute.

The conference begins Wednesday in the MSC with a display of entries in the ORC's outdoor recreation photography contest. The deadline for entering the photo contest is Friday. Photographs will be judged on their depiction of the essence of outdoor recreation. Albaugh says.

An exhibit of recreational equipment from local merchants will be on display at Rudder Fountain the second day of the conference and seminars will be conducted for the first three days.

On March 5, hands-on experience will be provided in workshops in kayaking, first aid, photography and mountain climbing equipment.

Two trips scheduled for the last day of the conference include a hiking trip on the Lone Star Trail and a canoeing and kayaking trip on either the San Marcos River or the Guadalupe River. The trips will cost about $10 to $15 each.

"We feel that this is a service project," Albaugh says. "We are offering an opportunity for individuals to increase their awareness of the outdoors and the environment while they enjoy themselves as well."

CS council to discuss rezoning

The College Station City Council will hold a regular meeting at 7 tonight in city hall.

The agenda for the meeting includes the consideration of rezoning a tract of land in Southwood Valley. The council will consider a request to rezone the tract, which is adjacent to A&M Consolidated High School, to commercial.

The College Station school board voted Monday night to request that the council consider the proximity of the high school when making a decision.

Also on the agenda for tonight's meeting is consideration of plans for a neighborhood park improvements project.
