You only go around once

United Press International
SAN FRANCISCO — After 51 hours and 23,500 miles, all aviator Brooke Knapp wanted was a "cold beer" to celebrate her record-setting around the world flight.

Instead, the 37-year-old got roses and champagne from her husband, Charles Knapp, as she emerged Friday wearing a red-and-white flight scarf from the Lear 35 business jet. "The American Dream," she flew for an unofficial 50 hours, 32 minutes and 45 seconds.

"All I want is an ice cold beer and a lot of relaxation," said Knapp, who accepted the champagne in a welcoming ceremony at San Francisco International Airport, the same place she left on Wednesday. Her time was about 15 hours better than the 1966 flight of Henry Beaird, who flew the same distance in 65 hours and 35 minutes with a four-man crew.

Knapp, president of Jet Airways Inc. of Los Angeles, was accompanied by two copilots and a mechanic who fixed a fuel-pump problem late Thursday in the Caroline Islands. She called him the "unsung hero" of the flight.

"For me it was the greatest adventure of my life," she said.
Her husband said he was "proud" of her. He said she "turned an inordinate fear of flying into a profitable business."

Church studies alcohol's place

Can a Christian affirm alcoholic beverages as a part of God's "good gifts to us?"

Yes, says a Lutheran specialist in substance abuse.
"Until we do," adds Dr. John E. Keller, "we will never adequately, as church or society, address issues, attitudes, behaviors and problems that have to do with chemical health."

In short, says Keller, Christians must move beyond a wet-dry morality to what he calls an "upstream" consciousness of chemical health.
Keller is president of the Lutheran Center for Substance Abuse in Park Ridge, Ill.

According to Keller, the most neglected group in the church is not the non-drinking minority but the drinking majority.

"For them the church and society have no approvals or guidelines as to what is healthy drinking vs. unhealthy, appropriate vs. inappropriate, acceptable vs. unacceptable, integrated vs. non-integrated," he said.
But, says Dan Anderson, president of the Hazelden Foundation, which runs the Hazelden Rehabilitation Center in Center City, Minn., "We are notoriously downstream."
"Downstream" programs provide treatment and alleviate for chemical dependent persons while "upstream" programs focus on prevention and promotion of healthy lifestyles.
