Reagan asked for EPA papers

United Press International
WASHINGTON — Congress has sent President Reagan "specific information of criminal conduct and other wrongdoing" at the Environmental Protection Agency and asked him to release all documents subpoenaed earlier.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Oversight subcommittee, said to the president: "With this letter, the subcommittee is bringing to your attention specific information of criminal conduct and other wrongdoing which has been developed during our Stringfellow investigation."

The information was developed from "sworn testimony of EPA employees by the subcommittee in executive session," Dingell said.

Dingell quoted Reagan as saying at his Feb. 16 news conference he would not invoke executive privilege to cover up wrongdoing.

"Mr. President, the time has arrived for you to meet your assurances," Dingell said. "There exists more than a suspicion that documents are being withheld to cover wrongdoing. It is only with the immediate and total release of documents which you have withheld that we can answer these most troubling concerns."

Dingell told reporters the subcommittee would issue more than a dozen new subpoenas to present and former EPA employees, including embattled EPA Administrator Anne Burford.

He said the panel also was investigating indications that there was a "hit list" of civil service employees at the agencies whose attitudes might be suspect.

Dingell also said that the subcommittee's investigation would be expanded to include the toxic waste cleanup of Riley Tars in Minnesota, and that the investigation of the toxic waste dump in "Tar Creek, Okla.," would be intensified.

Dingell said three EPA employees have testified under oath that Ms. Lavelle, was told on May 28, 1982, that an Aerojet-General subsidiary was involved and that there was need for her to disqualify herself from further involvement in matters pertaining to the site.

In his letter to Reagan, Dingell said that Rita Lavelle, former head of EPA's toxic waste cleanup program who was fired Feb. 7 by Reagan, may have committed perjury in testifying about her former employer, Aerojet-General, which was listed as a source of waste at the Stringfellow site in California.

Dingell said three EPA employees have testified under oath that Ms. Lavelle, was told on May 28, 1982, that an Aerojet-General subsidiary was involved and that there was need for her to disqualify herself from further involvement in matters pertaining to the site.

Ms. Lavelle testified under oath that she first learned of Aerojet's involvement on June 18, 1982, and disqualified herself at that time.

Dingell said the panel also has received evidence that Ms. Lavelle's activities prior to May 28, 1982, "may have involved unethical conduct and a conflict of interest" concerning Stringfellow.

"Surely you must agree that the facts which the subcommittee has developed and authorized me to share with you through this letter extend beyond mere allegations," Dingell said.

"We believe these facts present evidence of wrongdoing, unethical behavior and potential criminal conduct."

"It is because of this belief that the subcommittee now refers the matter outlined above for consideration of prosecution," Dingell said.

On Monday, Dingell said, following four hours of testimony by EPA employees, that "We have begun to develop testimony which indicates that there may very well have been political pressure or political judgments used in connection with Stringfellow."

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill said Congress would dig until it got to the bottom of the EPA situation, but he said he hoped that no scandal would be found.
