Gas leak believed cause

Apartment blast kills one

United Press International
GREENVILLE, N.C. — An explosion believed caused by leaking gas ripped through a three-story apartment building housing mostly college students shortly before dawn Tuesday, killing one person and injuring at least 12 others.

"We heard people screaming. There was a girl that had been blown into a tree that was beside the apartments," said Frank Gargano, who lives in a building across from the one that was destroyed.

Gargano said the girl received only a cut on her forehead.

Police first said two people had been killed in the explosion, but at mid-morning they said the death toll was one.

"I opened my eyes and there was smoke everywhere," said Vivien Lo, a foreign student attending East Carolina University. "I had been blown to the other side of my bed."

Sue Holloman, resident manager of the Village Green apartment complex, said 40 to 45 people lived in the building, which has 26 apartments. Holloman said six to eight apartments were destroyed or heavily damaged.

"It's unconfirmed, but it seems there was a gas explosion in the laundry room," she said.

Police Capt. John Briley said the explosion ripped through the building at 5:40 a.m., and rescuers sorted through the wreckage throughout the morning looking for more victims.

Holloman said she lives about two miles away from the complex and heard the explosion.

"I didn't know what it was," she said. "Then a few minutes later I got a call."

Holloman said about 75 percent of the residents of the complex are students attending Carolina University.

Lo's apartment was next one that had been destroyed. She said she looked out her window and saw a man wearing shorts sitting on a car shifter after his apartment had been destroyed. She said she gave him a blanket.

Six killed in Alaska, shooting suspect held

United Press International
McCARTHY, Alaska — Police arrested a man suspected of killing six people and wounding two others Tuesday in a shooting spree in a remote mining community described as a "virtual ghost town," authorities said.

Word of the killings reached Alaska State Police when one of the wounded, a man shot in the head, was flown out on a mail plane early in the day from McCarthy, 225 miles east of Anchorage, 50 miles from the Yukon border.

After reports that the suspect was barricaded in his home, troopers converged on McCarthy in helicopters and planes and arrested the man without incident, said Paul Edscorn, a trooper information officer in Anchorage.

"They did find six bodies," said. "The suspect himself had been wounded sometime during the day, apparently it was a wound in the leg."

The wounded victim, reported in serious condition, was taken to Faith Hospital in Glenallen, located 100 miles west of McCarthy, Edscorn said.
