Space calls recorded on new computer

United Press International
CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — If and when E.T. phones Earth, scientists will be ready with a new computer to select the call from millions of other radio waves and store the message until humans can decode it.

An 85-foot-diameter dish will receive the millions of radio waves that constitute galactic noise. The waves will be amplified, converted, analyzed and finally stored on tape by a computer programmed to select out "magic waves."

Pulitzer Prize-winning astronomer Carl Sagan and a select group of scientists gathered Monday at Harvard's Oak Ridge Observatory in Harvard, Mass., to turn on the computer's power, beginning the Search for Extra-Terrestrial Intelligence project, called SETI.

Harvard physicist Paul Horowitz, who designed and built the receiver that originally was suitcase-size but now occupies half a room at the observatory, said there are magic radio frequencies that scientists theorize would be known to other civilizations because the laws of nature are the same everywhere.

"This represents the beginning of the first serious, long-term, dedicated search for extra-terrestrial intelligence in human history," Sagan, of Cornell University, said Sunday.

Sagan said alien civilizations might use those radio waves to send announcements of their existence to other civilizations.

A radio telescope will search the northern skies round-the-clock, 365 days a year for any sign that other civilizations are trying to say hello.

Horowitz said there is reason to believe intelligent civilizations exist elsewhere.

possible, but it's cheap," he said. It would cost about $1 million.

Horowitz said the search between Earth and another civilization would produce great that would be a "cross-over" or exchange of rather than a dial.

His sophisticated search technology would receive 130,000 frequency channels, at once a one minute what the search technology would have taken 100 years to accomplish.

"It will provide a rough search for the cosmic haystack and will lay the ground even more thorough planned in the future."

Thomas McDonough, coordinator of the Society, that helped project.

First Summer Session

Open to All TAMU Students

COME TO SEE SLIDES OF THE PROGRAM AND HEAR ABOUT THE COURSES

TUESDAY, MARCH 8
3:30 P.M.
MSC 140

Aggies will attend classes at the picturesque LaPoggerina monastery, located in the hills near Florence. There will be many tours, cultural experiences, and sightseeing. Trips to Florence, Pompeii, the Amalfi Coast, Siena, Rome, and Venice are included. Students will enroll in two classes (from among Archaeology, Art, Literature, Western Civilization, Italian Education & Culture, and Management: Organization Theory). All questions will be answered and details provided at the meeting.

Custody protest planned

United Press International
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The Greater Kansas City Hispanic Coalition for Civil Rights is planning a public protest over the court-awarded custody of a Hispanic Roman Catholic orphan to a Mormon couple instead of his Spanish-speaking grandmother.

Felicitas Moreno was denied custody Jan. 13 by the Missouri Court of Appeals of her grandson Joshua Lee Henson. The child's parents were killed in the skywalk collapse at the Hyatt Regency Hotel. James and Barbara Jones of Independence, who have cared for the boy since his parents' deaths, retain custody.

A motion to rehear the case on behalf of Mrs. Moreno was filed Jan. 19 but Friday the motion was denied.
