Coogs

ings will be in the back of the mind of every player who walks out to meet UH Saturday at 12:10.

You want statistics? How about Drexler's 46 dunks this season alone? How about the Cougars' 21.6-point margin of victory over its SWC foes? How about 128 blocked shots, 174 steals and 349 assists, all in conference play.

Had enough? How about the Coogs' 20-game winning streak and their 10-game winning streak on television? The list goes on forever.

Lewis said the Cougars' success can be traced to the fact that guards Young and Franklin, along with reserve Reid Gettys, have jelled solidly.

"What could have been called a weakness," Lewis said, "has become a strong point for us. They've (the backcourt trio of starters Young and Franklin, along with Gettys) done what we've wanted them to do — and that's get the ball inside to the big guys. They're doing what we ask of them, they're not selfish and I'm very pleased with their play."

This has been a good season for SWC basketball. There are several teams worthy of post-season bids — among them Texas A&M. But nobody can come close to the Cougars this year. Aggie coach Shelby Metcalf said it best.

"We've got a great group of coaches here," Metcalf said Wednesday. "To show you how together we are, we each contributed equally to Guy's record this year."

Exactly. And Metcalf and his fellow coaches — no matter how well their teams play in the tournament — will contribute to Lewis' record again. Phi Slama Jama rolls on. And there's nothing anyone can do to stop it.

Aggies

games during the latter part of the SWC schedule.

SMU's Bliss and Texas Tech's Myers, on the other hand, finished the year with a bang, but seemed to be content with just reaching the tournament.

At the press conference, Myers raved over his team's accomplishments this season, as did Bliss, but when confronted with questions on how their teams would fare in the tournament, both coaches went back to the "We're just glad to be here" line.

Texas A&M, however, wants more — much more. Aggie guard Tyren Naulls said there's pressure on the Aggies, but Texas A&M is up for the challenge.

"Coming into a tournament like this," Naulls said, "every game could be your last and you need confidence. And we do have confidence right now. We're definitely prepared to handle it. There's some (pressure), but we're still pretty much relaxed."

Naulls said one reason the Aggies are playing better than they have all year might be the recent play of the Texas A&M guards.

"We're at our best right now," he said. "Kenny Brown is shooting better than he has all year, and so is Reggie (Roberts). I feel the guards are playing very well together. We're not ready for our season to end yet."

If the Aggies want to continue playing the first step is to get past TCU tonight at 7:30. Roy Jones said it'll take a great team effort for the Aggies to do so.

"Our first win over TCU (60-58 in overtime on Feb. 26) was a big hill that we had to get over and when we did we really started playing better and better," he said. "Now we think it will be all downhill. It's going to be tough, but I know we've got it in us."

No-hitter brings softball team sweep of Bulldogs

The Texas A&M women's softball team swept a double-header Wednesday from the Louisiana Tech Lady Bulldogs, winning by scores of 2-1 and 4-0 at the team's field in the Penberthy Intramural Complex.

The Aggies split two road games with the University of Texas-Arlington Lady Mavericks on Tuesday, losing the first game 1-0 despite a no-hitter by senior Lori Stoll. Texas A&M won the second game 4-0 on a two-hitter by Shan McDonald.

In Wednesday's first game, the Aggies scored the winning run in the bottom of 10th. In the bottom of the third, Texas A&M's Mary Schwind singled with one out and pinch runner Rose Ruffino moved to second on a passed ball. After center fielder Cindy Foster sacrificed to third, Cindy Cooper hit a line drive off the Tech third baseman's chest, allowing Cooper to reach first and the run to score. Patti Simon hit a solo home run in the top of the fifth to give the Lady Bulldogs their only run.

In the bottom of the 10th, the Aggies' Foster led off with a walk and Cooper sacrificed her to second. Catcher Gay McNutt hit a grounder to the third baseman, who looked Foster back to second and threw McNutt out. Upon the throw, however, Foster went to third.

Josie Carter then hit a grounder to second, but it was bobbled and Foster scored the winning run to give Stoll her second victory of the season. Stoll gave up two hits, struck out 14 and walked one.

Texas A&M won the second game 4-0 behind McDonald's no-hitter. To lead off the bottom of the first inning, Foster singled and Cooper squared around to second but hit a single through the infield. After McNutt popped out to left field, Carter hit a sacrifice bunt to put runners on second and third with two outs.

Aggie shortstop Carrie Austgen hit a shot to the Bulldog shortstop, but she overthrew first base on the putout attempt, allowing two runs to score.

In the Texas A&M sixth inning, Carter tripled with one out and Austgen hit a home run to right field. Although Austgen had only one hit, she wound up with three RBIs and a run scored in the game. Foster had two of Texas A&M's six hits in her three trips to the plate.

McDonald's no-hitter included seven strikeouts and one walk in seven innings. The senior from Canada has a 3-0 record on the season.

Louisiana Tech entered the double-header with a record of 4-0.

Texas A&M, now 5-1 on the season, will compete in the Oklahoma Invitational next Thursday through Saturday. The Aggies, ranked No. 2 behind UCLA in the most recent national poll, are two-time tournament champions.

This chart shows the blood alcohol level (BAL) and risk of collision for varying numbers of drinks consumed in a 1 hour period. One drink is equivalent to a 12 oz. can of beer, a 4 oz. glass of wine or a drink with 1 1/2 oz. of 80 proof liquor.

The safest policy is not to drive after drinking, but if you must drink and then drive, know your personal limit and stay within it. In most cases, the driver's personal limit is about .05% BAL, far below the legal limit at .10%. Alcohol Awareness Project — Dept. of Student Affairs, 845-5826.
