'fuses' new, original sounds

Carlton says they learn the music by ear because printed music often is missing parts or has been changed somewhat.

He says the group is considering adding keyboards to its performances. This would get rid of empty spots in the music and give Carlton and Foster time to relax; now, they often play two parts.

"This (adding keyboards) will make the music more like we want it," Carlton says.

"We want quality," Gaither says. "We're never satisfied."

The band recently performed at the MSC All-Nite Fair. Carlton says the performance, which began at 7 p.m. and ended at 2 a.m., drew one of the group's largest audiences.

"Our favorite crowd is the A&M student crowd," Maloney says.

Fusion also has played at Gatti's, Dallas, Lakeview, the Thirsty Turtle, Backstage and fraternity parties. They have played at clubs in Huntsville and Brenham.

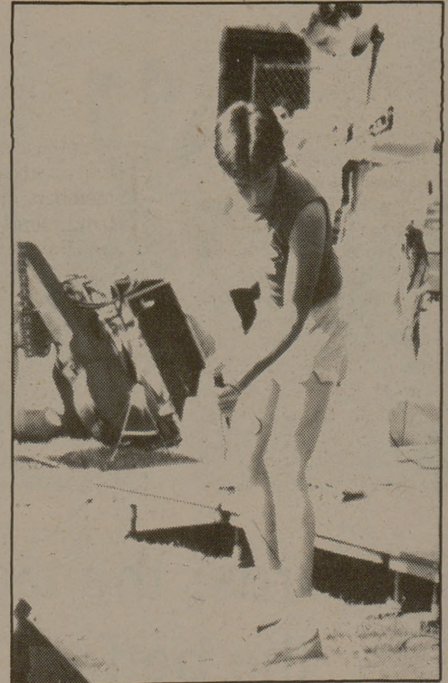

"We like the crowd here (in College Station)," Carlton says. "It's been nice, and given us confidence."

Carlton says this summer the band hopes to get an agent and perform in other cities. Maloney says the group wants to continue to be based in College Station because the city is centrally located in respect to the major cities in Texas.

"We'll just see how it goes," he says. "This summer we plan to go all out."

"Our main goal is to make it big — just like everybody else," Maloney says. "You can still make it if you're imaginative and forward."

"... and with luck," Carlton adds.
