Gas fumes kill one

United Press International
 PRINCETON, La. — A worker expecting to find crude oil residue inside a railroad car was asphyxiated by nitrogen gas, and eight other men who inhaled the fumes were injured.
 Jerry Larkins, 27, of Princeton was the first man to enter the tank at Calumet Refining Co. about 9:30 a.m. Wednesday. He collapsed and was dead on arrival at Bossier Medical Center.
 Jerry Nelson, 30, of Bossier City tried to rescue Larkins and also passed out from a lack of oxygen in the tank. He was in guarded condition at the hospital's intensive care unit.
 Six other workers who inhaled the gas were hospitalized for observation, and another man was treated and released, state police Lt. David Permenter said.

 "They had brought a tank car to clean out and reload," Permenter said. "Ordinarily they just have crude residue in them. This one did not have crude — it had nitrogen gas residue in it."
 The tank car had returned from Houston after carrying a load of lubricating oil, fire rescue personnel said. The nitrogen apparently was used as a rust inhibitor.
 There was no warning of nitrogen in the car, Permenter said, and a hazardous materials expert was investigating the accident.

Thief who held family identified

United Press International
 DALLAS — An armed man jumped from the bushes as a bank's head cashier returned to his home Wednesday, held him and his family hostage through the night and forced him to give him money at the bank before business hours Thursday.
 The man, identified as one who attempted a similar crime last month, escaped with $12,000. FBI agents and police were investigating the crime.

Howard Conine, head cashier of the Parkway Bank and Trust, said the man took him hostage at about 8 p.m. Wednesday. Early Thursday the robber took the man, his wife and child to the bank where the official withdrew the money.

The family then drove with the robber to within a block of their north Dallas home, and the man got out of the car and escaped.
 A spokesman for Dallas police said the man tried a similar crime against an employee of InterFirst Bank last month, but the hostage and her boyfriend escaped and the man failed to get any money.

Law requiring student draft vouchers stayed

United Press International
 ST. PAUL, Minn. — A federal judge granted a preliminary injunction Thursday blocking enforcement of a law requiring students to register for the draft to be eligible for federal student aid.
 U.S. District Judge Donald D. Also agreed with six anonymous students who challenged the law, saying they would not be able to comply with it without putting themselves in jeopardy with the U.S. Selective Service System.
 Congress last year said students applying for loans or work study funds must sign a statement saying they had registered for the draft before they could get financial assistance. The law was to have become effective beginning in the 1983-84 school year.

 The suit was brought against the federal government by the Minnesota Public Interest Research Group, a student-funded organization, along with six anonymous male students.
 Also said the Selective Service System had enough power to get people to register for the draft with the current penalties of five years in prison or a $10,000 fine for violation.
 University of Minnesota President C. Peter J. Dinklage said a number of students opposing the requirement said the university's effect by turning students to the government for financing.
 The judge said his preliminary injunction was not to challenge the constitutionality of the draft law. He said the validity of the draft law remained upheld by the Supreme Court.

Soviet satellite joins station

United Press International
 MOSCOW — The Soviet Union Thursday announced the docking of a satellite with the Salyut 7 space station in a move western experts say may enable man to permanently live in space.
 The news agency Tass said the satellite, Cosmos 1443, which was launched March 2, docked with the space station at 3:20 a.m. CST.
 The satellite provides for further trials of on-board systems, equipment and structural elements of advanced space vehicles and practicing methods of control of orbital complexes of a large size and weight, Tass said. The dimensions of the module were not disclosed.

 When it was launched, western space observers said the satellite appeared to represent the culmination of several years of tests with other space stations in preparation for permanent occupancy.
 One expert said the successful docking likely would be followed soon by the launch of three cosmonauts.
 Salyut 7 was launched last April and in 1982 was the temporary home for three crews of cosmonauts, including that of Anatoly Bereznev and Valentin Lebedev who finished a space endurance of 211 days, 9 hours and 45 minutes.
 "Cosmos 1443 is a complex of equipment, apparatus, various cargoes for conducting further functioning of Salyut 7 station and carrying out scientific research on the crews of cosmonauts."
 The news agency said the complex was orbiting at a maximum distance of 202 miles from the earth.
