No-nukers protest train

United Press International
SEATTLE — Antinuclear war demonstrators protested Saturday against a mysterious white train moving at 35 mph through western states and believed to be carrying 100 nuclear warheads to the Navy's Trident Submarine Base at Bangor, Wash.

Ben McCarty, a Department of Energy spokesman in Albuquerque, N.M., confirmed that a train with nuclear material was moving to Bangor. He declined to be specific about the cargo, but confirmed the train carried armed guards.

Jim Douglass of the antinuclear Ground Zero organization in Washington state said, "It's probably the most destructive train in the world. We estimate that it has about 100 hydrogen bombs on it."

Navy officials in Bangor and at the Pentagon declined to comment on the train because of policy.

Douglass said the train left the Pantex Corp. in Amarillo, Texas, where nearly all of the nation's nuclear warheads were assembled, Friday afternoon.

Members of the anti-nuclear network "Agape" planned vigils along the way as the train moved slowly through Colorado, Wyoming, Montana, Idaho and Washington.

Three persons, including a Catholic priest, were arrested Saturday in Denver for walking on the tracks in the train's path. In Fort Collins, Colo., eight were arrested as they knelt hand-in-hand along the tracks while a crowd of perhaps 100 sympathizers chanted, "We shall not be moved."

Guilty verdict doesn't shake convictions of faithhealer

United Press International
EBENSBURG, Pa. — William and Linda Barnhart face prison for refusing to get medical care for their dying, 2-year-old son. But Barnhart says their manslaughter conviction has not shaken his faith in his religion, which bans medical treatment.

The Barnharts, of Beaver Valley, were convicted of involuntary manslaughter and endangering a child's welfare in the death of their son, Justin. They were free on bond, awaiting sentencing. Each could face up to seven years in prison and fines of up to $15,000.

The Barnharts' attorney said he would appeal their conviction, and the appeal would be based on religious freedom.

Lifelong members of Faith Tabernacle, a fundamentalist Christian sect that eschews medical treatment in favor of prayer and divine healing, they sought no medical treatment for the boy, who died of a stomach tumor Sept. 10, 1981.

Barnhart, 56, a state parks employee, testified during the four-day trial that he never obtained medical treatment for any of his children.

After the jury returned its guilty verdict Wednesday, Barnhart was asked whether he would obtain medical treatment if his daughters ever be-

"No," he replied. "I changed my beliefs a

California coastal highway torn apart by violent storms

United Press International
SAN FRANCISCO — Battered by landslides and pounding surf, sliced away down its center line in places and simply swept away in others, one of Californians' favorite highways is taking an unprecedented beating from violent Pacific storms.

Highway 1, in better times a narrow two-laner of hairpin turns passing coastal forests and hundreds of miles of blue ocean, now bears scars that will cost millions to repair. Whole sections may have to be abandoned to the sea.

Since January, destructive rain, wind and waves have washed out and closed the road over much of its more than 700 miles from Eureka to San Juan Capistrano.

Parts of the highway are hanging right along the sea's edge, said Bill Ward of the state Office of Emergency Services. Waves of up to 30 feet have taken enormous amounts of the cliffs off into the ocean.

Mud and rock, washed loose from the mountains by above normal rainfalls, have covered the road in dozens of places.

On the road both north and south of Big Sur, landslides cut off access to and from the town last week, forcing the state to fly in supplies for local residents. There have been 17 major slides in Big Sur since the storms began.
