

yell leaders

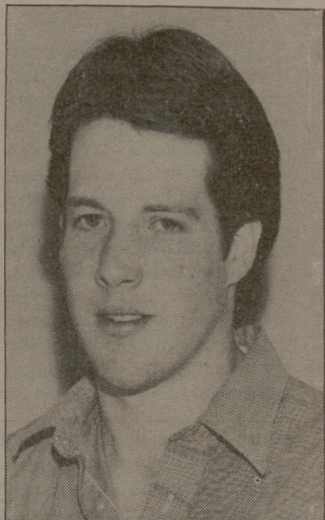

seniors

Trey Beazley
agricultural economics
Waco

My past leadership experience consists of president of Delta Y, president of Youth Council, Sphinx Polaris Leadership and Student Y Cabinet Aide. I also was very involved with Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

The reason I want the position of Senior Yell Leader is that I feel I will be able to bring about a sense of equal representation among our student body. It has been a tradition since 1922 to have a combination of non-regs and cadets to equally represent the student body. And I feel that I can lead the students in proving that "united we all stand."

If elected, my goals are to do the best job of uniting our whole student body from non-regs, to Corps, to off-campus students. I also plan on doing the best job I can to bring students out en masse to back our athletes.

Greg Griffin
finance
Fort Worth

I am in the Ross Volunteer Company and supply sergeant on First Wing Staff. I was a counselor for Fish Camp '81 and '82. I am guidon bearer of Squadron 8. I am presently on the Aggie Muster Committee, am a Eucharistic Minister for St. Mary's Church and am on the MSC Great Issues Committee. I've been a peer adviser and was a freshman yell leader for Elephant Bowl.

I feel that I could represent Texas A&M in a positive fashion. I could promote an enthusiastic attitude to the student body. I will try my best to inform new Aggies about the Twelfth Man. I believe I have the leadership experience to qualify as senior yell leader. And I feel that I would be very dedicated to the job and work to keep Aggie spirit alive and well.

I will try to promote a positive and an enthusiastic attitude toward Aggie spirit. I would try my best to represent A&M and the student body in a reliable and dedicated way. Lastly, I always would try to be available for any activity or function that concerns the student body and Twelfth Man.

Bob G. Bond
agricultural economics
Skellytown

I have served as a Fish Drill Team member and adviser and as a Ross Volunteer company member. I am commanding officer designate of First Group.

I always have respected and looked up to the yell leaders as leaders of spirit and tradition holders for Texas A&M. I feel that they should be of high standards in morals and in character. People should be motivated and fired up by the individuals. I feel that I am this type of individual and can keep the character and motivation to fire up the University as a whole.

A yell leader should keep himself highly motivated, dedicated and enthusiastic to carry these characteristics on to the student body of the University. An individual should keep himself respectable and be regarded highly by his peers.

Todd Kronshage accounting
Spring

I am the junior yell leader in charge of finances. I am also an active member in the Corps of Cadets, Company F-2 and a member of the Ross Volunteer Company.

Since the main goal of our school is the preservation of traditions, I feel that through the position of yell leader, I can intensify this spirit.

As a returning yell leader, I have seen the importance of campus-wide unity and think there should be a lot of emphasis in that direction, but my main goal would be to promote Aggie spirit and traditions and also create a positive representation at out-of-town functions and events.

Lloyd Neal
finance
Corpus Christi

I have experience as Fish Camp counselor (1981), sub-chairman (1982), chairman (1983), SCONA committee member, planning chairman for SCONA 28, Muster Committee, MSC Great Issues and dorm council.

I believe that I can be an effective and dynamic representative and leader of Aggie spirit. I have made a special effort to become actively involved in the events and traditions that have put A&M in a class by itself. Because of my knowledge of these traditions, my fierce love of Aggieland and my dedicated participation as an active member of the Twelfth Man, I feel that I am qualified to hold the position of senior yell leader.

If elected, I would continue my quest to see Aggie spirit as it truly should be: a harmony and sense of brotherhood that isn't confined to any particular segment of the student body, nor denied to any person because they may choose to diversify their interests.

As yell leader, I would like to take an active role in encouraging greater participation at all athletic events, especially basketball, baseball and women's athletics.

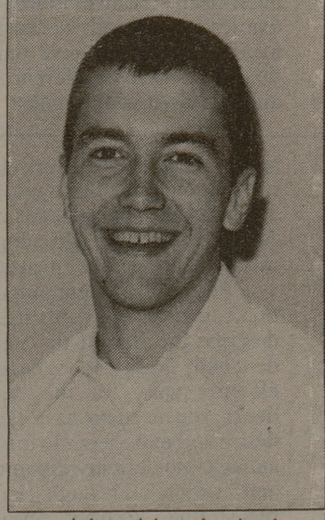

These sports have yet to reach their potential in terms of sustained crowd support. My major goal, though, would be to pledge a 100 percent commitment to the principles and ideals that this University holds so dear.

Jeff Crofton industrial distribution
Tyler

My experiences as a junior yell leader this past year have prepared me to represent Texas A&M University as a senior yell leader. I am a member of the Corps of Cadets and Company B-2. I was a sub-chairman for Fish Camp '82. Presently, I am a chairman for the Fish Camp '83. I am also a member of the Ross Volunteer Company.

I seek the position of senior yell leader because I want to work with people and represent Texas A&M in the best way possible. After serving as a yell leader, I have had the opportunity to see the tremendous schedule demanded, and I again am prepared to give all the time necessary to do the job well.

If elected, I intend to uphold the pride and traditions of this University. One of my major goals is to make more people aware of our University and the spirit and unity that surround it. The Aggie yell leader should be a continuous example of Aggie spirit, inspiring all Aggies to have pride in the spirit and traditions that make Texas A&M the unique institution that it should be.

juniors

James C. Becker Jr.
management
Lake Jackson

As a member of the U.S. Marine Corps, I have had the opportunity to get some of the best hands-on leadership experience available. My four years in the Marine Corps have provided me with many opportunities to develop my leadership skills.

I am not pursuing this position for status or glory, but because I have something to offer. Since I came to A&M, I have been in love with it. The pride and traditions here infuse a certain spark into the accounting/finance

Tom King
Houston

Working with MSC Political Forum, I've covered the spectrum from working on public relations with the Middle East debate to chairing the Jim Collins program. As a Young Life leader this summer, I learned to work better with groups and the importance of listening.

As a resident of Hart Hall, I've had the opportunity to work on such activities as bonfire and the Big Event, and have represented the dorm on the Judicial Board for the past three semesters. I'm also involved with MSC Great Issues, TAMU Abled/Disabled Committee and the Endowed Lecture Series.

I, like many other students who care about and work towards the betterment of A&M, want to be represented. The Corps is certainly an asset to this school, yet to deny the value that more than 30,000 civilians have to offer would be a terrible loss. I feel I have the ability and enthusiasm to

Kelly Joseph
accounting
Round Rock

I was a freshman aide, have been on the class council committees, the Corps public relations committee and served as the scholastic corporal. I also was a Muscular Dystrophy summer camp attendant.

I've been around Aggies and Texas A&M all my life. I love the spirit and the people. I hope I can keep Aggies unified with a position that enables me to represent the whole University. I'm a motivated person, but my desire for the position comes from a concern and feeling for the people of this school.

This University's great tradition is the outstanding people it produces. My goal as yell leader would be to use traditions to keep Aggies unified. Aggie spirit is the bond each