seem to notice me even more."

But she says: "There are some days I would give almost anything to be able to get up in the morning and put on a normal dress and high heels."

Sperandio, who has been in the Corps for four years, says attitudes about women in the Corps have changed during the past few years.

"When I was a freshman, the general attitude was that no woman belonged in the Corps," she says. "But now attitudes are beginning to change and the men in the Corps are working more and more with the women.

"Women in the Corps need to realize that things are not going to change overnight. The Corps was all male until 1974 and it's going to take time for women to work their way up."

Enrollment in the Corps for women has dropped during the past two years, but Sperandio says she thinks it will rise during the next few years.

"However, I don't see women's enrollment in the Corps at A&M increasing until more women get higher positions here," she says.

Tomorrow: Corps traditions.

'Friend sets teen on fire'

United Press International
STONY POINT, New York — A teenager poured gasoline on himself at a party Tuesday and then dared a friend to set him on fire, police said. The 'friend' allegedly took him up on the dare.

Detective Sgt. William Franks said James Sabolik, 17, is in critical condition at Nyack Hospital after being set on fire. Sabolik had second and third degree burns on his face, chest and arms.

Franks said that witnesses at the party told police Sabolik poured gasoline on himself and then dared Anthony Aiello, also 17, to set him on fire.

Aiello allegedly took his friend up on the dare shortly after midnight. Others at the party immediately tried to put out the flames.

Aiello was arraigned on charges of first degree murder and reckless endangerment and was remanded to jail in $5,000 bail.

About six teenagers were at the party, which police said was held at Sabolik's home. His father was believed to have been in the house at the time of the incident but did not witness the burning.
