Mother accused in infant deaths found incompetent

United Press International
MARSHALL - A 24-year-old woman charged in the deaths of two of her infant children in two states has been found mentally incompetent to stand trial in the beating death of her 3-month-old daughter.

A jury deliberated less than 10 minutes Monday before ruling that Sherry Lynn Allman, of Marshall, could not understand the charges against her or aid in her defense. But, jurors ruled that, with treatment, she probably would be able to stand trial in the near future.

Allman was charged with murder and injury to a child in the Nov. 9, 1982, beating death of Sherry Lynn Allman. She also has been charged in Kansas City, Mo., with second-degree murder in the 1976 death of her 4-month-old son, Marvin Neal Allman.

Allman will be committed to Rusk State Hospital for treatment until doctors there certify her as competent. That will take a minimum of 60 days and a maximum of 18 months.

Psychiatrists for the state and the defense examined Allman, and their reports agreed she was not capable of standing trial.

Harrison County District Attorney Sam Baxter said doctors at Rusk told him that, with anti-depressant drugs and therapy, Allman could become competent in about 90 days. She then would be returned to Harrison County for another competency hearing.

If she is found competent and ordered to stand trial, defense attorneys have said they would seek a change of venue due to publicity in the baby's death.

The deaths of three other All-man children initially were attributed to Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, but an autopsy of Sherry Lynn disclosed a fractured skull, neck, three broken ribs and arm injury.

That finding prompted officials in Texas and Missouri to investigate the other deaths led to the charges in Neal's slaying.

A third child, Joseph, 1978 at the age of one but that death has been attributed to SIDS. A fourth died at a premature

Families to file lawsuits

SAN ANTONIO - The families of nine children who died at Medical Center Hospital's pediatric intensive care unit will file wrongful death lawsuits against the hospital, an attorney said Tuesday.

San Antonio attorney Cornel Walker, who is representing all nine families, said he was in the process of notifying the Bexar County Hospital District that he intends to file the suits.

Walker said he had talked with "a bunch" of current and former MCH personnel, including doctors and nurses, who indicated that a grossly negligent situation existed at the hospital when the children died.

"It was pure and simple negligence," Walker said. "Those people (doctors and nurses) tell us the (hospital) administration knew that a tragic and grossly negligent situation was going on in the pediatric intensive care unit."

He said some of the hospital personnel he had talked with had testified before a Bexar County grand jury investigating the deaths, but he stressed that he didn't discuss grand jury testimony with any of them.

The grand jury is investigating the pediatric unit for an unusually high number of infant and child deaths from 1978 to 1982. Walker said most of his clients' children's deaths occurred in 1981.

District Attorney Sam Millsap and Chief Deputy District Attorney Nick Rothe, who is heading the grand jury probe, declined to specify the number of deaths under investigation.

A doctor from the University-based Center for Disease Control joined the investigation weeks ago, and his report was completed in the last two weeks.

Walker said it did not matter if the grand jury found a homicide was involved in the deaths.

"As far as my suit is concerned, it doesn't matter whether it's homicide," he said. "I'm going to call anybody a murderer unless they are found a criminal court."

Divorcee a success

United Press International
MCALLEN - Phyllis Griggs came out of a bad divorce 10 years ago feeling "ugly and stupid," and added the word "broke" to that litany after putting what little money she had into a Mr. Donut shop.

Now, 10 years and six Mr. Donut franchises later, Griggs heads a million dollar business with 35 employees and this month was named the Small Business Administration's Texas State Small Business Person of the Year.

"I came out of my divorce feeling dumb and ugly. I didn't feel very good about myself. I didn't feel very good about anything," said Griggs, who in May will travel to Washington for a round of SBA receptions.

The former Phyllis Rieger grew up in Rapid City, S.D., and during her marriage worked as a secretary for the Corner Construction Co. She had no formal education beyond high school. The skills she developed as a secretary were the extent of her business talents.

"Ten years ago on April Fools Day I bought a Mr. Donut shop from my ex-husband," she said. "I was 35 years old, I had been in McAllen for six months, I had very little money and an 8-year-old daughter. We (she and her daughter) were on our own. We didn't know anybody except a real nice banker who went way out on a limb" and loaned her the money for the shop.

Griggs said she worked 15 hours a day, "working the counter, scrubbing the floor and hauling flour."

"Our employees became friends and our family," she said. "This (award) is success. This is their success helped me a lot."

In her first year in business years ago, Griggs said she grossed about $250,000. She said she closed this year with $1.3 million in volume. It would have been higher if she were hurt by the valuation.

Eighteen months after opening the first shop she opened a second one, and 18 months later she built another. In total, she owned six shops in South Texas. She has sold three shops and had another one.

In the SBA Texas office, Griggs was one of the other Texas businesswomen who were named Small Business Person of the Year. She was advised by SBA officials it was unusual for such a young woman to have a successful business in this line.

Griggs has not remarried. Her daughter is now a student at Southern Methodist University in Dallas.

"A lot of women come to me because they can't make it," she made it. But it took determination and guts."
