

Two flags stolen

During the weekend of Jan. 21, someone cut the cables on a flag pole and stole a large American flag from 3007 Longmire in College Station. The total loss was more than $1,000. About six weeks later, another American flag, 10-feet by 18-feet, was stolen from Joe Courtney, Inc.

If you have any information on the persons responsible for these thefts, call Crime Stoppers at 775-TIPS. If your information leads to the arrest and grand jury indictment, Crime Stoppers will pay you $1,000 in cash. All callers are issued special coded numbers to assure anonymity.

Women's choir gives spring concert at 8

by Donn Friedman
Battalion Reporter

The Women's Chorus will present its spring concert at 8 tonight in Rudder Theater. "It will be a varied concert featuring everything from sacred secular music to patriotic pop and swing," said Patty Fleitas, director of the chorus. "In our concert this Friday night we will try to, through our music and text of every song, bring the audience and the performers together as an entity," she said.

The group started because there was such an abundance of talented female singers on campus that an all-female group was needed, Fleitas said. The Women's Chorus gives those talented females a place to perform.

Tonight's concert is one of the about 15 concerts the Women's Chorus performs each year.

"We are always looking for invitations to perform at banquets, conventions and other events," Fleitas said.

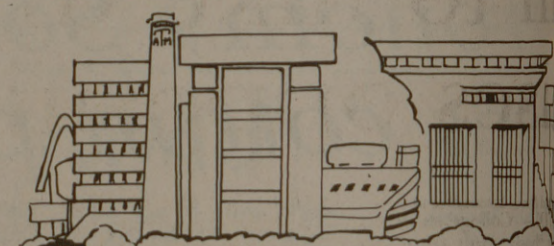

The performance for this evening is arranged around themes, she said. The first half of the show will include religious, folk and patriotic music. After intermission, the chorus will perform a 1940s medley and some contemporary love songs, including a song written by two Texas A&M students.

The song "Remembering" was written and composed by Donna Darsey of the Women's Chorus and Neil Hall of the Revelers.

The selections for Women's Chorus programs are chosen by the director. Fleitas said she uses three criteria when choosing what the choir will perform.

She said the music should enrich and advance the technical quality of the choir member's voices, the program should be varied enough to entertain the audience and selections should be written for an all-female group.

Tickets for the Women's Chorus concert are $3 and $3.50 and are available at the MSC box office.

Council takes vote on zoning

by Ruth Wedergren
Battalion Reporter

The College Station Planning and Zoning Commission sent a rezoning proposal for an area in Prairie View Heights to the City Council without a recommendation Thursday night.

A tie vote on the approval of the proposal brings it to the Council without a recommendation of approval or disapproval for the rezoning.

The proposal, which calls for rezoning eight lots on the west side of Tarrow Street between Banks and Peyton streets to single family residential lots of 5,000 and 4,000 square feet, was not the original rezoning proposal.

The original proposal rezoned the lots from commercial industrial to neighborhood business and single family residential districts.

This proposal was initiated by the City Council after 65 residents brought a petition to the Council saying that liquor sales at a restaurant in the area were causing problems in the neighborhood. The plan was changed by the commission, but they could not recommend approval of the new proposal to the council.

The commission also approved the rezoning of an area on University Drive and Lincoln Avenue from single family residential to smaller single family residential lots, administrative-professional district and low-density apartments.

In other action, the commission approved final plans for the Emerald Forest Recreational Facility and Villa on the Rio Grande, which is zoned for low density apartments.

Majority oppose nuclear freeze at forum debate

by Scott Griffin
Battalion Reporter

In a public debate Thursday night, a Rudder Tower audience voted against a freeze on the development and production of nuclear weapons by the United States.

In the debate, sponsored by the Texas A&M debate team, students voted 166-69 against a unilateral freeze on the further development of nuclear weapons.

The topic of the debate was, "Resolved: that a unilateral freeze on the production and development of nuclear weapons by the United States endangers and undermines U.S. national security."

Michael Scott, a senior management major from Goliad, delivered an opening speech in favor of the resolution. His argument included three main points: — the Soviet Union cannot be trusted; the breaking of the Yalta treaty, the Helsinki accords and the first SALT treaty are reasons to distrust the Russians. — a freeze would give the Soviets a military advantage. The Russians already have a lead in number of missiles, and any freeze would only widen the gap. — Third World countries would obtain nuclear weapons and pose a threat to the United States if a freeze were to occur.

Harold Hinkle, a sophomore political science major from Brazoria, gave the opposing speech. Hinkle favored a freeze because, he said: — the Soviets and Americans currently have nuclear parity; the balance of power in Europe is equal. All NATO forces are equivalent in strength in the area. — the current balance of power favors the West. The advantage in missiles is of superior American strength. — current research in beams and space weapons make nuclear weapons obsolete. President Reagan's plan to destroy nuclear missiles eventually make nuclear weapons obsolete.

After the opening speech, the debate was opened for public comment. Many appeared to be against a freeze from the beginning, and was split up into pro-con sections, with the pro side people. The con side will receive a Triathlon and every finisher will receive a commemorative coffee cup. The event is sponsored by Bryan/College Station Chapter of Commerce, the Texas Intramural-Recreational Department and the local distributor. Due to this event, Drive will be closed from railroad tracks to the station of F.M. 2818 from 4 a.m. to 4 p.m.

900 swim, run and bike in Triathlon Two Saturday

Registration for the Texas Triathlon Two was closed on March 18 with 900 entries.

The event will begin at 6:30 a.m. with a one-kilometer swim in the Cain Pool. The participants will then run ten kilometers from the pool through the campus and surrounding areas to the Olsen field baseball complex, where they will pick up their bicycles and ride 30 kilometers. The race will end back at Olsen field.

Tom Weis, assistant director of Intramural-Recreational Sports, said participants in the event are from twelve states and range in age from 12 to 67. There are ten age divisions, and plaques will be awarded to the top four finishers in each division.

Plaques will also be awarded to the youngest, the oldest and the fastest male and female entrants who finish. Every entrant will receive a Triathlon and every finisher will receive a commemorative coffee cup.
