Education seminar prepares graduates

by Michael Raulerson
Battalion Reporter

Opportunities in human resource development careers will be the topic of a series of training seminars held this month by the College of Education Inquiry Group on Education in Diverse Settings.

"Our graduates aren't accustomed to the corporate world, so we ask human resource developers to come and talk about opportunities open to them in large corporations," said Dr. Daniel Householder, chairman of the group.

Householder said graduates who enter human resource developing occupations will train supervisors who will in turn train other employees.

Expectations of employers are higher than they used to be, he said, and firms such as Southwestern Bell have classroom and laboratory training programs for employees in addition to on-the-job training.

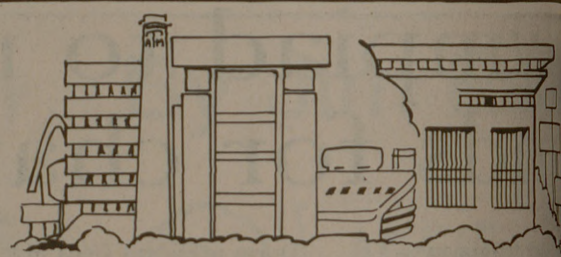

The instructors in the training programs would be human resource developers, he said.

Bill Blakemore, a district staff manager in training for Southwestern Bell, will speak at the first of the series of two seminars to be held from 1 to 3 p.m. Tuesday, April 12, in 302 Rudder Tower.

John Monville, director of the supervisory training department of Gulf Oil Corp., will speak at the second seminar to be held from 3 to 5 p.m., April 18, in 510 Rudder Tower.

The speakers will talk about several aspects of human resource development opportunities. Speech topics will include the role of trainers, entry level qualifications in academic training and job experience, tips on securing interviews for human resource development positions, expected career paths, salaries and company philosophies on training and development.

Householder said a few seminars were held last year, and he felt that they were successful.

Budget slashed for educators

United Press International
AUSTIN — The State Board of Education, lamenting that recent slashes in revenue estimates would make teacher pay raises impossible, voted Saturday to trim its 1984-1985 budget request by about $1 billion.

The board's action was in response to Comptroller Bob Bullock's announcement last week that the state would have nearly $3 billion less to spend on the biennial budget than was anticipated last fall.

Board members had asked the Legislature for a two-year budget of $14.3 billion, but reduced its request by about $1 billion Saturday.

The original request was for an increase of just more than $2 billion over the previous biennial budget, but Chairman Joe Kelly Butler said it now appeared only $920 million in new money would be available.

"Unless a new tax is passed by the Legislature, the amount of funds that will be available for school finance is $920 million above current funding," Butler told the board.

Because other funding sources would take up the entire $920 million, Butler said "it would not be possible within these constraints to provide significant salary increases for teachers."

He said that if more money becomes available, teacher pay raises should be given top priority along with maintenance of operation funds and expansion of aid to help school districts avoid local tax increases.

Butler said creating a "teacher excellence fund" to ensure that money earned for pay raises would not be funneled into pay for new administrators or salary supplements for extra-curricular activities.
