Dentist drills, fills monkey's cavities

United Press International
DETROIT — Peanuts the chimp had problems with tooth decay but fortunately Detroit zoo officials knew a dentist who makes cage calls.

The operation Monday marked the first time in the zoo's history a chimp has had a tooth filled and filled.

"They're just identical to human cavities," said Dr. Terry Myers, who did the job.

Myers has performed dental work on the zoo's gorilla and Siberian tiger population in the past.

Zoo director Steve Graham said the cavities were probably the result of too much junk food. Peanuts, who is pregnant, is expected to be a performing chimp and her trainers occasionally rewarded her with a candy bar, potato chip or sip of soda pop.
