Wrongful death law is revised

United Press International
AUSTIN — The Texas Supreme Court, revising its interpretation of the state's wrongful death law, ruled Tuesday that juries may award damages for mental anguish in the death of a child.

In a 6-3 ruling, the high court said the current law that allows damages only for the economic loss of a child is "based on an antiquated concept of the child as an economic asset."

"If the rule is literally followed, the average child would have a negative worth," wrote Justice Franklin Spears. "The real loss sustained by a parent is not the loss of any financial benefit to be gained from the child, but is the loss of love, advice, comfort, companionship and society."

The high court's ruling rein-

Child left 4 hours in car disappears

United Press International
SAN ANTONIO — Police are investigating a missing person report given by a woman, who claimed she was formerly a man who underwent a sex change operation, and said her sleeping son was abducted in a car stolen from a shopping mall parking lot.

Detective Pete Lopez said the woman, who gave her name as Debbie Smith, of Los Angeles, reported her son, Damon, 7, was sleeping in her car when it was stolen Tuesday from North Star Mall.

Lopez said the woman's report to street police Paul Rangel, but she made any further contact with authorities since late Tuesday.

Rangel said the woman claimed she was formerly a man who underwent a sex change operation. It was not clear if the child was adopted, fathered by the woman, or the operation, Lopez said.

According to police, Smith picked up a man and went inside the mall at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday, and stay only a few minutes using the keys in the car. However, she stayed inside about 1:30 p.m. When she returned, the car and the child were gone.

Lopez said he sent a man to Los Angeles for more information on the woman. The address she gave Rangel to address the case was found to be false. She described as being 4 feet tall, with hair and blue eyes.

"We don't know anything," Lopez said. "We do know if it's true and we're anything."

Lopez said the case was open, however, and was investigated as a missing child, although the homicide unit briefly took the case as a kidnapping.

"Our hands are tied," Lopez said.

OSHA delays warrant

United Press International
DALLAS — A federal agency was warned Tuesday ago that construction site was unsafe but made no attempt until four workers injured in a three-story building.

Even since the warning, according to a Dallas official, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration has not invoked emergency powers allowing it to obtain a search warrant to investigate other potentially dangerous platforms in the tower addition, being built by Loew's Anatole Hotel.

Charles M. Freeman, director for the Dallas office, said Tuesday, that the OSHA was to speed the investigation because he did not think there was an "imminent danger" of an accident like Sunday's occur.

Before and since the OSHA inspectors have been allowed to enter the construction site to investigate.

James T. Goff, general contractor for the project, said one safety violation OSHA were from contractors involved in a unionizing effort.

Pat McIntire, a union representative helping in the attempt, said Orion Construction engaged in illegal firing and harassment in trying to break the union off.

Freeman, the OSHA director, said one of his inspectors visit the construction site to investigate safety violations but Orion refused to allow access.

Freeman said his office attempt to obtain a court order as soon as possible to investigate the site.
