Glenn says quotas, programs necessary

United Press International
NEW ORLEANS — Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, putting himself squarely at odds with the Reagan administration, said Saturday that racial quotas have been "very productive" in correcting employment discrimination.

Glenn, a candidate for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination, said affirmative action and racial quotas are necessary to correct situations where "people were unfairly held down because of race or creed or color."

"We've been moving out of a time period where it really was not fair, where racial matters did make a huge and tremendous difference," Glenn told the National Conference of Black Mayors.

"You don't just say that we will gradually drift on for another hundred years and let things assimilate over four or five generations. I think when you see a wrong like that you move to address it, and that's what the affirmative action program is all about," the former astronaut said.

William Bradford Reynolds, the Justice Department's top civil rights enforcer, said in a speech Friday that using racial quotas is morally wrong.

Glenn said racial quotas are needed in some situations in both government and private industry, but not in every area. He refused to specify in which instances quotas could be useful.

"In government, they have been very productive and I think have done a good job in basically moving people out of a situation that was unfair for them into more fair employment patterns," he said.

Glenn accused the Reagan administration of trying to roll the clock back to live in the days of yore, and frustrating civil rights gains by refusing to enforce them.

"We're not going to live in the past, we're going to live in the future," Glenn told the mayors representing more than 200 cities.

Glenn went to Dallas Sunday evening to appear at a fund-raiser for former Democratic Party chairman Robert Strauss. Earlier, Glenn told millions of Georgia Democrats in Marietta, Ga., his Marine Corps experience would enable him to stand up to the military as president.

Glenn also accused the Reagan administration of "hogging our seed corn" with popular tax cuts that will short-cut scientific research for the future.

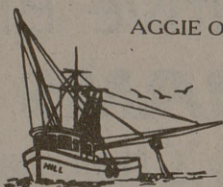

Glenn said Japan and other European nations have overtaken the United States in various industries and are moving ahead while most American students can be graduated from high school with only one science course.

East 29th Street at Carter Creek

United Press International
HOUSTON — Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, while announcing his candidacy for the U.S. Senate in 1984, promised to "pound the streets" and be accessible to Texans.

Doggett, 36, made the announcement Friday on the steps of the Albert Thomas Convention Center beneath a marquis announcing Sen. John Tower's million-dollar fundraiser Friday night.

"It will be a choice between a Republican, who probably none is going to see in Texas, maybe outside of an election year, unless they can afford to come to a big gala like this, and a Democrat who will be out pounding the streets," he said.

Doggett, a 10-year member of the State Senate, said he will not formally start his campaign until after the legislative session, but said he had filed notice with the Federal Election Commission in Washington.

He criticized Tower, who has served in the Senate for 22 years, for supporting President Reagan's economic policies and said he will support the Democratic Party's economic ideas. "I think it's a matter of having a balanced economic package and maintaining low inflation but not at the expense of several millions of people unemployed," Doggett said.

Doggett criticized Tower's chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, for a strong support of what he called a wasteful defense budget. Doggett emphasized he supports reasonable defense expenditures that would keep the defense industry in business.
