Cards win; Braves rip Astros

United Press International
 Ken Oberkfell got lost in "The Twilight Zone" Thursday but returned to earth in time to act the hero for the St. Louis Cardinals.

Oberkfell made an uncharacteristic mental error in the second inning when he mysteriously wandered off second base on a one-out popup to the infield and got doubled off for the third out to cut short a Cardinal threat.

It could have cost the Cardinals the game, but Oberkfell in the ninth inning delivered a two-run single to give the Cardinals a 4-3 victory over the San Diego Padres.

"I wanted to redeem myself because of what I did on that double play," said Oberkfell. "At first it looked like it was going to fall but I knew it would be an infield fly rule one way or the other. I'm not sure why I was so far off base."

The Cardinals pushed across the winning run against loser Gary Lucas, 0-2, with two out when Willie McGee singled, stole second and scored on Oberkfell's line single to right.

In the other National League game on a light schedule, Atlanta beat Houston, 6-3. In the only American League game, Cleveland topped Minnesota, 7-5.

BRAVES 6, ASTROS 3—At Atlanta, Dale Murphy hammered three hits, including a two-run homer, and scored three runs to power the Braves. Murphy took over the NL home run lead at eight with his two-run blast in the first inning. Rookie Craig McMurtry, 3-1, scattered four hits and allowed two runs in six innings.

INDIANS 7, TWINS 5—At Minneapolis, Andre Thornton extended his hitting streak to 10 games, driving in two runs, and Rick Sutcliffe, 4-1, and Neal Heaton combined on an eight-hitter for the Indians. Heaton earned his third save. Brad Havens, 3-2, took the loss.

Bruins defeat Islanders with 'solid' goaltending

United Press International
 BOSTON — Pete Peeters has adopted a kind of let-by-gones-be-by-gones philosophy toward goaltending.

And it makes sense the way he played Thursday night.

With the Bruins facing elimination, Peeters helped extend their season one more game with a solid 21-save effort in backstopping Boston to a 5-1 victory over the New York Islanders. The win moved Boston to within 3-2 of the three-time defending Stanley Cup champs. Game 6 is Saturday at Uniondale, N.Y.

"He has saved us all year," said Brad Park. "He's better than Florence Nightingale."

And Peeters played like Florence Nightingale in Games 3 and 4, allowing 15 goals in a pair of Boston defeats.

But, as he says, "Whatever happens, happens. You can't let the past bother you because there's nothing you can do about it."

"Pete's as much as professional as anyone I know. He told me he was all right and that's what I needed to know," said Park.

Peeters whiffed on a Bob Nystrom 58-footer at the 3:12 mark and that was it for the Islanders. Boston roared back with five unanswered goals in the next two periods.

"We seem to have a knack of falling asleep at the wrong time," said Islanders' goalie Billy Smith, who was rested in the third period. "Maybe we didn't gear ourselves up or we weren't afraid enough to play like we should have played."

The Bruins played their best game of the series, checking for 60 minutes and capitalizing on the breaks they created. When they digressed, Peeters was there. In order, he robbed Anders Kallur, Bob Bourne, Paul Boutilier, Denis Potvin, Wayne Merrick and Duane Sutter.

But among the missing marksmen was Mike Dufour who went with him.

"He was interesting all night," Bossy said. "It's illegal, but it's also a game and I'm not complaining. He had a job to do and he did it."

Bossy had one shot in a meaningless slap shot second period from the line. It was the first time he had ever shadowed a line.

"He did a good job of him clean," said Boston's Gerry Cheevers.

"He did a good job of it," said Coach Al Arbour.

But, without Bossy, the Bruins sputtered and had shots, although several excellent opportunities.

Arbour's score, the Bruins bounced back on seconds apart by Craig Trott and Barry Pederson. Trott's first-period lead goal. Bourque (nine seconds power play), Peter Molteno (off an Islander) ended the second period.

Brown

"I think God showed me that I had my priorities in the wrong order," Brown said. "The accident was His way of putting my goals back in the proper perspective."

"I finally realized that God decided it was time to change. And football wasn't what he wanted me to pursue any longer. I guess He thought I'd be better doing something else."

And Brown is doing something else. He plays and referees both intramural basketball and football. He helped coach the senior cadets in the Elephant Bowl and plans to continue helping the Aggie football coaching staff in the fall.

Brown lives in the athletic dorm and will continue to receive a full athletic scholarship for his two remaining years of eligibility. The financial aid, he says, is one of the factors that helps guide his life.

Brown said before the accident, his life had no direction. "I was just doing stuff and going to class and trying to get a long-term goal in mind. I didn't know what was needed through the day."

"Now, after the accident, everything I do is directed toward attaining my ultimate goal. I'm happy, healthy and content with my life."

Part of being happy, Brown said, is playing intramural ball and basketball. He plays for recreation rather than playing under the intense pressure he did before the accident.

He also acknowledges the chance he takes of re-injuring his neck each time he plays. He calmly rattles off his saying: "Life is full of ups and downs."
