United Press International
HOUSTON — University of Houston baseball player Rayner Noble was named the Most Valuable Player in the Southwest Conference in voting by the nine conference schools.

As a pitcher, Noble was 6-2 with 1.60 ERA and as an outfielder and designated hitter had a .400 batting average.

Longtime Arkansas coach Norm DeBriyn, whose team finished second, was voted coach of the year in the balloting by publicists at the nine schools.

Conference batting champion Todd Howey of Texas Tech, who hit .432 as a freshman, was voted newcomer of the year.

The Texas Longhorns placed pitchers Calvin Schiraldi and Kirk Killingsworth, and infielders Jose Tolentino and Mike Brumley on the 1983 All-SWC team selected by the schools.
